Second cyclist is killed in a week on busy A2

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A 29-year-old cyclist has died after being involved in an accident with a car on the A2 on Friday, August 3.

The death is the second tragedy on the road in just a week, after another cyclist was killed in a hit and run just four days earlier.

Police were called to Friday's incident at Boughton after receiving a report that a cyclist had been involved in an accident.

The victim, a local man who has not been named, died after being involved in the crash with a silver Vauxhall Meriva. He was riding a bright yellow bike.

A 50-year-old man from Whitstable was arrested on suspicion of causing death by dangerous driving and has been bailed pending further enquiries.

The incident took place at around 7.40pm and police closed the road while they carried out investigations before opening it later that evening.

The Kent Police Serious Collision Investigation Unit want to speak to anyone who saw the incident or who was in the area at the time and had seen the cyclist or the car. Witnesses are asked to contact the police on 01622 798538.

Last week schoolboy cyclist Kyle Coen, 14, from Sittingbourne, died following a collision on July 30.

A man and a woman were arrested and have been bailed until October.

CRIME

Man attacked in the street

POLICE are appealing for information after a 19-year-old man suffered a minor head injury when he was attacked in Herne Bay on July 27.

He was walking at the end of Bishopstone Lane when three people followed him, knocked him to the ground, and stole his watch and baseball cap.

Cash for swift registration

TWO people who returned their electoral registration forms to Canterbury City Council have each won £250.

Susan Poynton of Adisham and Mr Strand of Whitstable won the money for sending their forms back quickly. Mr Strand has donated his prize to the Pilgrims Hospice.

FIRE

Early morning blaze in garage

A CAR has been set alight in Canterbury, causing thousands of pounds of damage.

The car was parked in a garage at Orchard Street on July 26 when the fire was started between 4.30-5am.

Anyone with information can call Kent Police on 101.

Athletes celebrate saved lives at the Transplant Games

A FATHER from Canterbury who had a kidney transplant will be taking part in one of the largest sporting events in the UK this month.

The British Transplant Games will be hosted in Medway and aims to highlight the difference organ transplants can make to people's lives.

Between August 23-26, some 600 transplant patients will flock to Gillingham to take part in track and field events such as running, high jump and a mini-marathon.

As well as raising awareness of the Organ Donor Register, the event will help patients regain fitness, meet friends, and share stories.

Laurence Sandum, 52, from Dean-sway Avenue, was diagnosed with renal failure and as the condition worsened he was put on the list for a kidney transplant.

Mr Sandum said: "After a year, the call came that an organ had been found for me. I went to the hospital and, after many tests, I was ready for the operation. When I came around from the transplant, it was a bittersweet moment. While I had been given a new lease of life and my two daughters, who were 10 and seven at the time, had their dad back, I knew a terrible price had been paid. I felt so sad that somewhere, a family was grieving for their loved one."

A year after his transplant, Mr Sandum went to his first British Transplant Games in Newcastle. Since then he has won many gold and silver medals and is hoping for more success this year.

OLYMPICS

Athletes are on their marks for final shot at Olympic Games glory

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THERE'S been laughter and tears from Kent's Olympians as they emerge from their first week of London 2012.

But it's not over yet, with another week and more competitions to go as they battle it out to add to Team GB's growing collection of medals.

Sprinting sensation Adam Gemili is in action this weekend in the 100m, and is determined to make the final and line up against Olympic superstar Usain Bolt.

Also hoping of a podium place is Chatham's trampolining star Kat Driscoll.

Two of Kent's Olympians have already emerged clutching medals; a silver for Canterbury horse rider William Fox-Pitt, after helping the three-day equestrian event team to success; and a bronze for Ashford rower Tom Ransley, who was part of the men's rowing eight.

Another athlete gearing up for action is Ashford's Lisa Dobrisky, who made her Olympic debut in Beijing 2008, finishing fourth.

She will run in the 1,500m on Monday at 11.45am.

"I really hope to make the final. I was fourth in Beijing - so for me to go one better would be the ultimate goal," she said.

scheme, which helps support performers through work with leisure centres, gyms, sports professionals, and local authorities.

"To be the best you need to train like the best and the range and quality of the facilities Kent has to offer allows athletes on the scheme to do just that," she said.

Other Olympians to have taken to the world's stage already are windsurfer Bryony Shaw, based in Tunbridge Wells, who will continue her campaign this weekend at Weymouth and Portland, and West Malling's Ashley Jackson who scored twice in the men's hockey against South Africa.

But while some have or are doing well, others competitors have seen their Olympic dreams shattered.

Bromley's Ellen Gandy was disappointed after failing to reach the semi-finals of the 200m butterfly.

And Canterbury hockey player Jen Wilson was devastated as her South Africa side were thrashed 7-1 in their opening game against Argentina.

Runner Jack Green, from Maidstone, was due to compete in the 400m hurdles on Friday.

Other Kent-based Olympians are hockey player Natalie Seymour, from Maidstone, and Sean King and Jack Waller, who train at Invicta Water Polo Club. Former Gillingham defender Ryan Bertrand has also been in action, helping Team GB reach the quarter-finals in men's football.

Sale of Pfizer site sparks enquiries from potential business tenants

A PRIVATE consortium has bought the former Pfizer site.

The announcement comes almost a year-and-a-half after the devastating blow that the drugs giant was pulling out of Sandwich, affecting 2,400 staff.

A consortium called Discovery Park Ltd, a special-purpose group set up by property development experts Trevor Cartner and Chris Musgrave together with Palmer Capital, have acquired the freehold of the 297-acre site, now called the Sandwich Discovery Park.

The site includes laboratories, offices and warehouses, as well as 84 acres of park used for a combined heat and power plant and processing facilities.

Paul Barber, a former managing director of Priority Sites, the Government regeneration company, will become managing director of Discovery Park Ltd.

"This is an exciting project for me and our whole team," he said.

"We look forward to working with Kent County Council, Locate in Kent, and central and local government to secure the long-term future of this site.

"Pfizer has taken a lease of around 250,000 sq ft of offices and laboratories and together with our other tenants we have around 1,000 people employed on site.

"We have received several enquiries from companies looking to locate to this site and we will progress these with extreme vigour."

MP for South Thanet Laura Sandys said: "I am thrilled Pfizer has sold the site at Sandwich.

"After hearing the new owners have already had a number of enquiries from companies looking to move to Sandwich, I am very confident that many new jobs will be created.

"This is exciting for the community and should see the start of further investment into the area.

"Sandwich is a great place to do business and I am sure this will be a huge success."

In June, exclusive talks with a different consortium led by property company London and Metropolitan broke down. There were fears this could delay progress at the site.

Despite Pfizer's withdrawal, more than 800 jobs were eventually retained and the site was granted Enterprise Zone status to encourage businesses to move to the park through incentives including tax breaks and lenient planning laws.

East Kent also received £40 million of the Government's Regional Growth Fund to help existing and new firms, and improve rail links.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Boy killed in hit and run

A MAN and a woman being quizzed by police following a hit and run near Sittingbourne which killed a 14-year-old boy, have been released on bail, pending further inquiries.

Kyle Coen, from Sittingbourne, was killed when the bike he was riding towards Faversham was struck from behind by a car.

It is believed the car - thought to be a grey Fiat Bravo - was then driven off in the direction of Teynham.

The incident took place on the A2 London Road, near Bapchild Cricket Club, at around 9.15pm on Monday.

A 27-year-old woman and 23-year-old man will return to a police station in Kent at a later date.

Baby Boom at Wingham Wildlife Park

Since the park was taken over by its owners, Tony & Jackie Binskin in 2008 it is not only the number of species on display which has grown, but the number of babies born each year continues to rocket. Tony explains their breeding success by saying, "we have got over 210 species on display in the park which is more than any other Kent zoo and we try to ensure that all of our animals are as comfortable as possible. We feel that a happy animal is going to be the best animal for producing healthy babies, so that's what we always strive for!"

"The summer months are the best time to come & see the animals here because it gives you a chance to watch some of the years babies grow up," Jackie explained. Over the past 12 months there has been a real boom in the species which have bred at the park which includes but is not limited to; Ring Tailed Lemurs, Red Ruffed Lemurs, Goeldi's Monkeys, Common Marmosets, Tufted Capuchins, Vervet Monkeys, Vietnamese Pheasants, Rhinoceros Iguanas, Egyptian Fruit Bats, African Crested Porcupines and much more.

There is visible excitement amongst the staff at the park about the world class breeding success becoming an annual occurrence at the Park with Tony exclaiming, "knowing where the park has come from and not having the financial backing which many of the countries bigger zoos have, it is really rewarding to know that we can still make a difference to many species. From this point we further increase the parks breeding success in years to come. The parks collection of felines is growing steadily and all of the keepers are looking forward to hearing the patter of kitten feet over the next few years, once the cats are paired and come of breeding age. Some cats are currently waiting for new arrivals, including mates for Binx the Puma and Luna the Black Jaguar.

It is not however just the cats where Tony and Jackie have their sights set high. Jackie explained that "we are working with a number of our species which are already set up in groups to encourage them to breed at our park, with a few of them being of high conservation importance." These species include their groups of Humboldt's Penguins, Flamingos, Mandrills, Emperor Tamarins & Nile Crocodiles.

In the past the park has already had success with very difficult to breed and rare species, being the first place outside of Australasia to breed Little Red Flying Foxes. At present Wingham Wildlife Park have the only Gray's Monitors on display in a UK zoo. This reptile species is notoriously difficult to keep in captivity but the reptile keepers at the park have done a great job at raising these beautiful lizards, and hopes are high that at some point in the future they will be able to lay claim to being the first breeders of this species outside the Philippines.

Tony finished by adding, "it is always expected that success with breeding species like the Flying Foxes is limited to the world's biggest zoos, and it is always great when we are able to make such a contribution and show the world that we are able to play with the big boys." As this park continues to grow and improve they are certainly worth keeping your eye on, which can easily be done through their Facebook page.

hope to just continue to grow and have more success."

This growth has already been set in to motion at the park with plans in place to

How to increase airport capacity without the need for a new airport

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archcant.co.uk

THE idea of a Thames estuary airport is not new.

Looking back over the last decade, the site has been earmarked several times as a possible solution to the South East's growing aviation needs.

And taking it back even further, the north Kent coast has been the focus for airport plans since as early as 1943.

It's likely that even if the latest ambitious proposals, one by architect Lord Foster on Grain and the other by London Mayor Boris Johnson on reclaimed land in the estuary, are scrapped, the plan will be back on the table before campaigners have time to put away their placards.

Many anti-airport protesters believe that unless a viable alternative is put forward, plans for an estuary airport near or even on the north Kent coast will never go away.

The issue is whether any of the alternatives will convince the Government it can offer a viable option to a multi-billion pound new hub airport.

In its discussion document Bold Steps for Aviation, Kent County Council stressed action must be taken to meet increasing capacity demands.

"Adjusting schedules and changing flight slots will not solve Heathrow's lack of capacity, but neither will building a new multi-runway hub airport in the Thames estuary which cannot be delivered in time to stop the UK's continued slide against its competitors," a spokesman said.

"The UK needs to be able to connect with emerging markets now and the quickest way of addressing this is to build on our current aviation infrastructure."

Aside from the devastating impact an estuary airport would have on the environment and the safety risks linked to bird strike, a major argument is the length of time it would take to build – around 15 years – and the money, at least £50 billion including the additional infrastructure.

Alternative options already have the advantage of being likely to take significantly less time.

These options will form the basis of the upcoming

■ A SENIOR politician at County Hall has thrown his weight behind plans for an airport in the Thames estuary.

Tory member Cllr Peter Lake, who represents Sevenoaks South, criticised Kent County Council's support for expansion at Heathrow and Gatwick.

He said Gatwick expansion would put an extra burden on west Kent and called for better use of Thanet's Manston airport. But he said he also believed the estuary airport was a viable option.

In its airport document Bold Steps for Aviation, KCC called for the estuary plan to be scrapped.

Other alternatives include the addition of a second runway at Gatwick and the use of existing airports, such as Manston in Thanet and Lydd in Shepway.

A new campaign group calling itself 'Why not Manston?' aims to raise the profile of the Thanet airport in the hope it will become a serious option in the aviation consultation.

Other options are to improve rail connectivity to main airports, which the Government is already committing to do in the South West and Wales.

Aviation capacity will be discussed later this year in the long-awaited, previously delayed consultation, with a decision expected next year.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Church machete attack

FIVE elderly people were injured after a masked man armed with a machete broke into St Barnabas Church hall and attacked members of a singing group. The man smashed the windows of the church at St Paul's Cray, near Orpington, and the vicar's car before breaking in. The injuries are not believed to have been inflicted with the machete, and are not serious. A 56-year-old man arrested for assault and criminal damage was treated in hospital for a hand injury.

➔ Cat's a Turkish delight

A KITTEN that jumped into a delivery vehicle in the Turkish capital Ankara ended up 2,000 miles away in Dartford after a nine-day journey. Workers at freight and logistics company Davies Turner found the cat, now named 'Yonda', when they unloaded the cargo. The six-week-old tabby has now been placed in quarantine and is in the care of Cats Protection, which is searching for a home and owner for the kitten, and someone to pay its quarantine fees.

➔ Huge steroid seizure

BORDER Force officers have seized a package containing around 1,000 vials of performance enhancing drugs at a Channel Tunnel terminal. The ampoules of nandrolone, an anabolic steroid, were discovered in a parcel being sent from Hungary to London by officers carrying out checks on Kent-bound freight at the terminal in Coquelles. There is no suggestion the drugs are linked to the Olympic Games.

REGENERATION

Multi-million pound drive to attract businesses to our coastal towns

GREEN technologies, tourism and scientific research are the focus of an ambitious project aimed at giving Kent's coastal towns a boost.

The new marketing campaign called Grow For It has been launched in support of the Expansion East Kent scheme which offers £35 million in loans to businesses who want to expand or move to the area.

It is designed to promote the benefits of locating businesses into the coastal districts of Shepway, Thanet, Dover and Canterbury.

Kent County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter, who commissioned the campaign, launched the scheme at an event involving more than 100 businesses and stakeholders.

"Everybody in east Kent is passionate about driving more investment and business into the area and this campaign will not only help achieve that, but will showcase the very real benefits firms can expect if they come here," he said.

"Our list of business-friendly initiatives in the area is long and growing every year, and we want to tell people about the terrific opportunities these districts have to offer."

Expansion East Kent was launched following a successful £40m Regional Growth Fund bid to the Government last year.

Some £35m of that is being used to offer interest-free loans to businesses in an attempt to unlock private sector finance, stimulate more than £300m in associated investment, and create 5,000 jobs over four years.

The three-year marketing campaign Grow For It will involve a programme of events and target specific industries, including green technologies, tourism and scientific research.

The area received a major knock last year when pharmaceutical giant Pfizer – one of the county's biggest employers – announced it would be pulling out of Sandwich.

But the devastating news prompted swift action which led to the creation of the Sandwich Discovery Park, on the former Pfizer site, and Enterprise Zone status, giving businesses incentives such as tax breaks and lenient planning rules to encourage them to invest locally.

EDUCATION

Unqualified teachers in academies 'will set schools back decades'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

EDUCATION experts have reacted with fury at a Government decision to allow unqualified teachers to work in the county's academies.

Critics say it will set Kent's schooling back 30 years and is just a cost-cutting exercise.

Ministers argue the move will allow academies, which are publicly funded but run independently from town halls, to recruit scientists, great linguists, engineers and other specialists who have not been able to work in state schools before.

But the decision has been attacked by the sector, with fears that generations of children will suffer. Currently more than half of Kent's secondary schools have become academies, and almost all of Medway's secondaries.

Fewer primaries have made the change, but this figure is expected to grow in the coming years.

John Walder, divisional secretary of the Kent branch of National Union of Teachers (NUT), said recruiting unqualified teachers was a dangerous move and one that could destroy a good public service.

"The people doing this don't care about the impact because they are the ones that send their own children to private school," he said.

"It's a dangerous move. The kind of people it could attract for these unqualified roles are failed graduates or those who didn't make it through their teacher training."

Mr Walder said it was a cost-cutting exercise where unqualified teachers would be paid less than those who had qualified.

"It's an attempt to break up teachers' pay and conditions. It's an attempt by the Government to get something for less," he said.

"They're not going to pay unqualified teachers the same. They will say it's wonderful to get these specialist people in, but what it actually is is a real step backwards."

His views were echoed by Gravesend-based expert Peter Read, of Kent Independent Education Advice, who said it would set education back 30 years.

"Education is so complex that people need training as professionals," he said.

"We have more people coming through teacher training than a number of years ago and the quality of teaching is rising year on year."

"Michael Gove (education secretary) is trying to go back to some sort of golden age that never existed."

A NEW SET OF RULES:

Government's decision to put untrained people in the classroom has been seen by many as a cost-cutting exercise that could seriously damage our education for many years

Mr Read said he believed some academies would take on unqualified teachers to save money.

But he warned the reputation of those schools' teaching would be damaged and parents would be less likely to want to send their children there.

Questions were also raised about whether specialists would want to teach in state schools for less money and that the quality of the teachers will not be as anticipated by the Government.

Qualified teachers will have undergone either a graduate course, combining a degree with initial teacher training; a year-long post-graduate training programme, involving school placements; or a work-based university training programme.

Teachers have to pass skills tests in maths and English. The qualification is awarded by the Government's Teaching Agency.

A Department for Education spokesman confirmed academies can now employ teaching staff which they believe to be suitably qualified, but without the automatic requirement of Qualified Teacher Status (QTS).

"This policy will free up academies to employ professionals – like scientists, engineers, musicians, university professors, and experienced teachers and heads from overseas and the independent sector – who may be extremely well-qualified and are excellent teachers, but do not have QTS status," he said.

ARMED FORCES

Parade will salute the fallen of WWI

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HUNDREDS of thousands of British soldiers died in World War One, and for many of them the last they ever saw of Blighty was the seafront at Folkestone.

An emotional march is being held on Sunday along the Road of Remembrance to recreate those last moments, and members of the public are invited to join in.

Called the Step Short Commemorative march, the event is organised each year on the first Sunday in August.

Organiser Ann Berry, 72, said: "It is on the lead up to the centenary of the First World War. Many millions of troops passed down this road to board the ships that would take them to the western front and an unknown future.

"On their way through Folkestone harbour they had their last cuppa in a cafe set up by the two Jeffrey sisters, and while there they signed eight books. Amazingly, one of them can be seen on the table in an old photo taken at the time at the Mole Café.

"Last year we had a re-enactment soldier take the role of Corporal Cotter, who though he lost a leg and had other serious injuries, still commanded his men in action. He did eventually succumb to his wounds and later received the Victoria Cross.

"Step Short is planning to build a permanent memorial arch in The Leas, Folkestone, in time for the centenary to commemorate the soldiers who fought and died.

"Also during that time there were 40,000 Canadians billeted here, 64,000 Belgian refugees, and even a Chinese work camp was set up just under the hills in Folkestone."

The march starts at 11am and anyone wishing to join needs to be on site half an hour earlier opposite The Grand on The Leas, said Ms Berry.

This is the fourth time residents have organised the event, which has been well attended in the past, and they hope this year it will be even bigger.

Ms Berry said: "This is something that needs to carry on.

"We cannot forget the sacrifice those men made for our freedom.

"We will be following the route eight million troops took down the Road of Remembrance as

THEN AND NOW: (Top row) Soldiers march on the Road of Remembrance and The Leas, and right is a re-enactor dressed as Cpl Cotter. (Middle) The Mole Cafe book and the cafe interior. (Bottom) The Parade Commander with the Royal Gurkha Rifles

Paedophile pensioner paid to see children in Ghana abused on web

A PAEDOPHILE in his 70s has been jailed for inciting children to engage in sexual activity.

Police raided the home of James Hawkins, 74, of Dane Park Road, Ramsgate, on April 1, 2011, after a tip-off that he possessed indecent images of children.

After being arrested he told the officer: "This happened before in Singapore, I served 18 months of a two-year sentence for indecent assault on a boy. "I thought I had put all this behind me."

Examination of Hawkins' computer equipment revealed 100 videos, ranging from levels 1-4; and 603 still images, with one image being level 5, the most serious level. It also revealed he had been engaging in sexual conversations with children in Ghana, aged between 11-16. A webcam was also used during the chats.

Appearing at Canterbury Crown Court, he was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment for inciting a child to engage in sexual activity, and four months for possession of indecent images of children.

The sentences will be served consecutively, minus 48 days he spent on remand.

He is also subject to a sexual offences prevention order.

Investigating officer, Det Con Abigail Cochrane from the Kent Police public protection unit, said: "Every one of the 603 images that Hawkins had on his computer contained a victim of crime. Hawkins transferred money into accounts in Ghana and in return children in a completely different continent also became his victims."

Sentencing Hawkins, Her Honour Judge Adele Williams said: "You became involved in contacting people in Ghana via chat logs. You were chatting with children and their pimps. "You used to watch sexual acts with children between the ages of 11 and 16 years-old."

"These children were being abused before your own eyes and you were paying for that."

Contrasting carnival fortunes as some thrive but others face extinction from public apathy

Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

THOUSANDS of people have lined the streets to watch Kent carnivals this year, proving the tradition remains firmly in people's hearts.

Yet some organisers are struggling to find funds and support for the events, putting some at risk of disappearing altogether.

Last month more than 2,000 people in Dover watched as carnival queens and bands took part in the procession through the town.

It was a scene very different to three years ago, when Dover was set to lose its carnival – but organisers say it is the best it has been for years.

Nearby Deal carnival saw its biggest turnout yet last week as a massive 40,000 visitors descended on the town.

Three Olympic Torchbearers, Jamie Clark, Joe Smith and Tracy Evans, led the procession with their torches, much to the delight of the crowds.

Further afield Paddock Wood had 3,500 spectators last year and Margate already has 100 major entries for its carnival in this month.

Organisers say the huge turnouts are down to a love for the traditions of the carnival and the memories of years gone by.

John Trickey, Deal carnival committee chairman, said: "This year Deal was the biggest carnival I have ever done. The weather helped, of course, as it was fantastic."

"The people of Deal are very protective and fond of the carnival – it's a week-long event. Most people have been coming to Deal carnival for 50 years."

It is a sentiment echoed among carnival val committees across the county.

Mick Tomlinson, chairman of Margate carnival, said: "Margate has got a good reputation for putting on a good carnival procession. People love the music, the colour, the ceremony."

But for other carnivals the end is fast approaching. Sittingbourne saw a low turnout this year and organisers warned 2013 could be the last time the procession takes to the streets.

Pam Griggs, chairman of Sittingbourne Carnival Association, said: "This carnival is for the people of Sittingbourne and it is those very people and businesses who should be putting entries into the parade if they want it to be bigger and better in the future."

"We would like to carry on again next year, it would be a shame to see a tradition of more than 100 years, come to an end just because people cannot be bothered to get involved."

"Without more input by our residents and businesses, 2013 could be the last carnival in Sittingbourne."

Carnivals rely on collections from the public to help fund their processions with the successful ones managing to collect thousands of pounds.

But Sittingbourne only managed £364.07 this year – one third of the amount they achieved three years ago.

Another issue facing committees is managing road closures.

Kent Police used to attend to keep things in check, but following a policy change in January, officers are no longer provided to manage traffic controls at events, leaving the responsibility with carnival marshals.

A spokesperson for Kent Police said: "It is recognised, however, that events such as carnivals, are of great importance to the communities. Kent Police will support organisers in the planning of such events, in conjunction with the Safety Advisory Group (SAG) and Highways Authority. Kent Police believes that a partnership approach will result in the safe delivery of events."

Mr Trickey, who is also the chair of Dover carnival, said a few factors make or break the success of the event: support from residents and the town council, and a good committee.

Alan Watson, chairman of Aylesham carnival committee, said: "We find it difficult because we are only a village. We cannot approach the same sponsors. We do get some great funding from Dover District Council for it and the parish council support us. We are lucky we are quite a healthy carnival."

But will the younger generation keep the tradition of the carnival running or are they more interested in playing computer games?

Mr Trickey said: "It won't die out. We have quite a few young people who are quite happy to be a marshal and do something in Deal carnival."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Brewer strikes gold

FAVERSHAM brewer Shepherd Neame has won a host of medals in the Olympics of beer, the International Beer Challenge. Late Red Autumn Hop Ale won gold and Canterbury Jack silver, while 1698 Bottle Conditioned Ale, Spitfire Premium Kentish Ale, Generation Ale, and Asda Extra Special Whitechapel Porter, won bronze. Head brewer Richard Frost said: "To win six taste test medals is a tribute to the expertise and experience of all the brewers at Faversham."

➔ Homes cash decision

THANET town hall chiefs have decided to spend money from the sale of council homes to fund extra social housing.

The move follows a government announcement raising the cap on right to buy discounts to £75,000 – generating interest in the sale of more properties. This has led to an increase in enquiries from interested tenants in Thanet, with nine enquiries for the first quarter of the year, compared to 15 for the whole of 2011-12.

➔ Parks flying the flag

CLARE Park and Whatman Park in Maidstone have both won Keep Britain Tidy Green Flag awards for the next 12 months to show they are among the best in the country. The council's Cllr John A Wilson, said: "The awards are a national recognition for the achievements of all those whose hard work has created these fantastic places. Parks have a huge positive impact on people's lives, providing places to play and relax."

POLICING

Independent police chief candidate will dip into her salary to pay for new youth commissioner position

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A HOPEFUL in the Police and Crime Commissioner race has vowed to give young people a voice if she is elected by creating a youth police commissioner post.

Ann Barnes, who is the chair of Kent Police Authority (KPA), the body which currently monitors the county's force, said it would be a paid job and open to all young people, from school leavers to gap year students and unemployed youngsters.

"A police youth commissioner will create a link to those who really know what it's like to be a young citizen in Kent," she said.

"There are a lot of disenchanted young people out there and we need to give them a say in policing."

Last week Mrs Barnes made the surprise announcement she would be standing in the PCC election as an independent on November 15, despite previously criticising the upcoming role, which is being introduced by the Home Office.

She told this newspaper she had no choice but to stand if the Government was to push ahead with the shake up. She is expected to step down as KPA chair in August.

The PCC will be an individual voted in by the public for a four-year term to replace the existing KPA on November 22. They will set the budget, determine a policing strategy, and have the power to hire and fire the chief constable.

The annual salary is £85,000. Mrs Barnes launched her youth initiative during a visit to community radio Academy FM at the Folkestone Academy.

She pledged to use some of her own salary to fund the post.

"It would be a paid job, different to an internship, and it will last for a year," she said.

"I'll take someone new on each year and they will be the face of policing for young people – the person who will give them a voice."

Mrs Barnes said the idea stemmed from the suggestion made by independent London mayoral candidate Siobhan Benita in April, who had said there should be a youth Mayor of London.

"I thought it made sense and was a really good idea. This is not just an electioneering gimmick," she said. "It will be something the young person can benefit from, they will gain experience and to have something like that on their CV would be brilliant."

"They will help me engage fully with young people the length and breadth of the county. So often, young people say they feel isolated from the work of the police. My youth commissioner initiative will bridge the gap."

Mrs Barnes said if she is elected the youth post would be in place by April 1, following an open recruitment process.

She is inviting feedback about the role at www.annbarnes.co.uk.

Other PCC candidates are Craig Mackinlay (Con), Harriet Yeo (Lab), Steven Uncles (English Democrats) and independent hopefuls Dai Liyanage, Ken Little, Fran Croucher, Fergus Wilson and Ian Driver.

SPACE TRAVEL

Auction revives interest in mystery around death of Nasa rocket man

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FIFTEEN years ago rocket fuel expert Robert Harvey was found dead on a platform near the top of a Titan space rocket – he had a six inch gash on his head.

A succession of unusual events in the wake of his death sparked a probe by his widow Yvonne, who was met by a wall of silence by Nasa.

More than a decade later the case is still shrouded in mystery.

But it is being thrown into the spotlight again next month with the sale at Folkestone-based Grand Auctions of several historic items linked to the expert.

Mr Harvey, who worked on the Nasa Moon probe, died on a platform near the top of a Titan rocket in Florida in 1997.

While this was put down to an accident, the events in the aftermath raised questions by his wife, who now lives in Kent, which even now remain unanswered and have sparked claims of a cover-up by authorities at Nasa.

Jonathan Riley, from Grand Auctions, explained that how the 60-year-old died has been shrouded in secrecy.

On September 19 the auction house is set to unveil a number of items including an American flag flown for the launch of the shuttle Columbia – an historic item given to Mr Harvey's wife following his death – and a signed photograph by Charles 'Pete' Conrad, the third man to walk on the Moon, which was given to Mr Harvey.

Mr Riley called the case a "shocking tale".

He said Mr Harvey, who was known as Bob, had arrived for work at 3pm on June 2, 1997, to make last-minute adjustments to the fuelling system of a rocket.

Despite Florida law stating he was not allowed to go up on top of the platform alone, his colleague refused to go with him, insisting he needed to complete paperwork.

"No amount of persuasion that the job should come first and the paperwork afterwards could influence him to join Bob," said Mr Riley.

"Bob had to lift a bottle of nitrogen weighing some 178 pounds in slippery conditions onto a trolley – it rained very heavily every day at about 3pm at Cape Canaveral. That is the last definite information about the fate of Bob Harvey."

At 5.15pm he was found lying on his back with a gash in his head and despite attempts to resuscitate him, he was pronounced dead.

His wife arrived at hospital to be told he had died. After recovering a little from the trauma she started asking questions, said Mr Riley, only to be met by a wall of silence.

A number of factors surrounding his death, she claimed, didn't add up.

Some two weeks after he died, the death certificate arrived stating he had died of natural causes as an inpatient, despite the ambulance crew confirming his death to Mrs Harvey.

Before the funeral, all his clothes were also returned, except for his shoes, which were recovered weeks later in an unusually pristine condition.

Mr Riley, who has been researching the case, said: "The shoes could have been a key element in the mystery of what had happened, alas the unmarked condition of the shoes could solve nothing and only create more suspicion. Why had it taken weeks to return Bob's shoes, and why were they in such pristine condition?"

Mrs Harvey, whose hair turned white overnight with shock, claimed her husband's colleagues had warned of "something fishy" and her attorney later found security cameras were not working on the day in question.

Mr Riley said: "Eventually she was offered $15,000 compensation, a derisory sum, which was increased to $50,000. She was unable to cash in his life policy, which covered accidental death. This is a shocking tale of either incompetence or a cover up to avoid the large sums in compensation for negligence."

Mr Harvey was given a 'brick' in the Spacewalk of Honour.

The auction takes place on Wednesday, September 19.

TRAGIC DEATH: Items belonging to Robert Harvey, who died while working at Nasa, are to be auctioned off. They include a photograph signed by the astronaut Charles 'Pete' Conrad

Birth of plastic surgery revealed in war records of pioneering medic

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WOUNDED British soldiers returning from Afghanistan and Iraq have benefited from skills pioneered by a surgeon at a Kent hospital during World War One.

And now records of those historic procedures have been made public for the first time.

It traces the incredible work of revolutionary plastic surgeon Dr Harold Gillies, and many of the details are now available online at findmypast.co.uk.

The archive marks the 130th birth year of the surgeon and 95th anniversary of the opening of the Queen's Hospital in Sidcup, where plastic surgery began.

Dr Gillies is renowned for developing the first skin grafting and plastic surgery techniques to treat the appalling injuries suffered by World War One soldiers.

Many were left with severe facial disfigurements, but thanks to the more than 11,000 operations performed between 1917-25, these were lessened to some degree.

The doctor's ceaseless groundbreaking work earned him a knighthood in 1930.

The records are an index of the 2,328 soldiers treated at the Queen's Hospital during this time, with information including names, regiments, ranks, the injuries they sustained, plus the dates they joined the Army, arrived overseas, were wounded and then admitted and discharged from hospital.

Debra Chatfield is the family historian at the website. She said: "The medical world owes a great deal to Dr Gillies, as do those who were treated by him in the early 20th century and anyone who has ever received plastic surgery treatment since."

"Without his pioneering developments in this field, plastic surgery might not be as advanced as it is today. These records are an important source of information for historians, the medical world and those interested in learning about the reality and aftermath of World War One."

One marked example is that of William M Spreckley, a lieutenant from the Sherwood Foresters Service in the British contingent, 16th battalion. He became Gillies' 132nd patient after being shot in the face.

The 33-year-old was admitted to the hospital in January, 1917, and eventually discharged more than three years later.

Dr Sam Alberti, director of museums and archives at the Royal College of Surgeons, said: "Dr Harold Gillies was a founding figure in the history of plastic surgery, developing innovative procedures to help reconstruct the faces of badly injured soldiers and airmen, whose facial injuries were caused by bullet wounds and flying shrapnel and needed extensive bone, muscle and skin grafting to restore their appearance."

"Most notably, Gillies introduced the tubed pedicle which used the patients' own tissue to aid reconstructive surgery and reduce the chance of rejection."

WOUNDED: From 1917, Lt William M Spreckley went through more than three years of treatment after being shot in the face

CRIME

Benefits cheat is tagged

A WOMAN has been tagged for six months after being convicted of fraudulently claiming more than £40,000 in benefits from two councils over 14 years.

Catherine Lee, 62, of The Limes, Ashford, defrauded both Ashford and Dover councils while claiming housing and council tax benefit.

She admitted at crown court to 13 charges of making a false statement with regards to not declaring a joint account with her husband from which she had access to his income while claiming the benefits.

Lee was sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court to six months imprisonment suspended for 18 months. She will also be electronically tagged and have a curfew between 7pm-6am for six months.

Judge Carey said: "This was a deliberate, knowing fraud to which she pleaded guilty to, not an oversight as she said to probation."

"I am not going to send this lady to prison, not out of sympathy but this is because it is not in the public interest and this is better served by repaying the monies."

"You pleaded guilty to dishonesty, you have committed serious criminal offences and you need to come to terms with that."

Lee was also ordered to pay £2,400 towards prosecution costs.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

KCC 'sorry' after watchdog rulings on two complaints

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT County Council has apologised after a double lashing from the local government watchdog.

The ombudsman severely criticised KCC over its treatment of a disabled girl, and also of an elderly woman who needed a residential care payment.

In the first report the ombudsman highlighted County Hall's failure to help a young woman with learning disabilities. College student Miss B did not receive the required services for a year.

Local Government Ombudsman Anne Seex said KCC's "poor communication led to uncertainty, confusion and frustration for the young woman and her family, and she was denied a direct payment and the choice to arrange her own respite care".

The ombudsman found maladministration by the council in not assessing Miss B until four months after she was 18, 10 months late; not producing a support plan for another four months; not including Miss B's assessed needs that were eligible for services in the plan; poor communication with Miss B and her family; not offering Miss B's mother a carer's assessment; not offering Miss B direct payments to arrange her own care, and finally restricting respite care for Miss B to its own residential care homes.

The second case involved an elderly woman released from hospital who was entitled to short-term residential care close to her daughter. The daughter had found a placement, but KCC refused to pay for it so the daughter paid and then started the complaint.

Ms Seex said: "Internal guidance said staff could only use the council's own homes, places it had 'pre-purchased', or community hospitals. The requirement to offer service users a genuine choice of placement when they are assessed as needing residential care is enshrined in law. Guidance did not adhere to these principles."

The ombudsman found the instructions from senior managers were contrary to the 1992 Choice of Accommodation Directions, which state a person can choose a permanent or temporary residential care home, if certain conditions are met, as in this case.

She found maladministration by the council for refusing to fund the first four weeks in the home; issuing instructions contrary to Government directions; not realising the instructions were wrong after the complaint; and not correcting them.

Cllr Graham Gibbens, KCC cabinet member for adult social care and public health, said: "It is important we take responsibility for the things we got wrong in each case. We have apologised wholeheartedly and taken lessons from both cases.

"We will continue to look at ways to improve what we do, while at the same time being responsible with the lives of those who use services – and with public money."

Traffic accidents halved at town centre 'shared space'

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

A CONTROVERSIAL town centre 'shared space' scheme has seen the number of traffic accidents fall in the last year.

Figures produced for Ashford Borough Council's overview and scrutiny committee show a 50 per cent decrease in personal injury crashes compared to last year.

Only one incident involved pedestrians, and two cyclists were caught up in accidents over the last year.

The 2008 scheme turned Ashford's ring road into streets where drivers and pedestrians have equal priority.

Signs and traffic lights were removed so pedestrians and drivers interacted and negotiated for space and right of way.

Kent County Council planning development manager Bob White revealed the figures in his report.

He wrote: "Safety on the ring road has improved significantly as a result of making it two-way and introducing the shared space."

"The one recorded pedestrian incident in the shared space occurred in Bank Street and was not related to the street design."

The £15 million system was implemented to lower casualties on the road and to improve safety – but it hasn't been without its critics.

A study conducted by the University of the West of England said some of the safety claims made in support of shared space were "exaggerated", and that pedestrians actually chose to avoid crossing the road.

And in Canterbury, councillors have voted to keep Westgate Towers closed – despite being inundated with hundreds of letters of complaint from the public.

The traffic management scheme was put in place on March 27 to stop lorries and buses damaging the historic archway and to improve air quality in the area.

It was set to last 12 months while assessments were made on its impact, but traffic chaos led to around 4,000 people signing a petition calling for a public debate on the issue. The executive at Canterbury City Council discussed the concerns and unanimously voted to keep the scheme in place for the full year.

Steve Coombs from campaign group Get Canterbury Moving said they were disappointed with the move and planned to take further action.

He said: "They [the council] are determined to make this stick for as long as possible."

The voice of Kent for health and social care

From April next year, the Local Involvement Networks, also known as LINks, will be replaced by Local Healthwatch organisations.

Local Healthwatch will have responsibility for providing information about access to health and social care services, gathering the views and experiences of people who use services and making these known to commissioners and providers.

Kent County Council is keen to support voluntary organisations who may be interested in bidding for this service by providing grants of up to £1,000.

To find out more and to apply for this grant, please go to:

KENT REMEMBERED

DEFENDING THE FAITH: A re-enactment of Prince Louis' attack on Dover Castle took place last week

French ambition dashed on Dover Castle walls

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

IN the year 1216, just after tyrannical King John signed the Magna Carta, the future of England rested in the balance.

Many of the barons who had forced the King to sign the famous document giving his subjects greater rights were furious the ruler had chosen to immediately disregard his promises.

And with no other claimant to the throne they turned their eyes across the English Channel, where Prince Louis of France had successfully taken many of John's former possessions on the Continent.

And they invited the Frenchman over – pledging their support for his bid to seize the crown.

As the nearest sea crossing point to France, the castle at Dover has been a site of strategic military importance since Roman times.

Matthew Paris, the medieval chronicler, supported this assertion when he referred to Dover as 'Clavis Angliae' – the key of England.

Part of the castle's colourful history was bought to life at the weekend when the French assault on the stone walls was recreated – with the same result, a victory for its defenders.

Prince Louis landed in England on May 21, 1216, forcing King John to flee north with his army while the French prince marched to Canterbury, where he was welcomed by the citizens who threw open the gates of the city to him.

Following this easy success, the city of Rochester was quickly taken and, after a short siege so was the nearby castle, enabling Louis's army to control the river crossing and the road to London.

But as prospects looked bleaker for John as the French army swarmed into London and secured the city, one fortress remained loyal.

Louis – who had by now taken control of southern England and had victory and the throne in sight – was forced to turn his attention towards Dover.

With his army encamped in the town of Dover, Louis spent several days observing the castle and the surrounding area, so that by mid-July he was prepared to lay siege to the mighty fortress.

Leaving half of his army to protect the town, the 29-year-old prince set up an encampment directly in front of the castle. Siege engines were erected along with a siege tower and, by sending his fleet to sea, he cut off any possible route for supplies or reinforcements from land or sea.

Dover Castle, with its defences marshalled by a loyal supporter of King John named Hubert de Burgh, was now on its own and at the mercy of the French invaders.

Miners tunnelled under the timber barbican which was soon breached and captured. Moving on to the castle gates, undermining was once again employed and succeeded in bringing down one of the two massive stone towers.

Through the breach in the wall, the French army stormed the castle, but were held back by the its defenders who had managed to close the gap using timbers and cross-beams which had been stripped from the castle's interior.

Defending their positions staunchly, the garrison forced Louis to pull back his army, which was also suffering casualties from a guerilla army of archers recruited from the forests of the Weald of Kent and led by William of Cassingham.

With this heroic defence of the castle coupled with the fact the French siege artillery had failed to make any impression on the castle walls, Louis decided to negotiate a truce.

On October 14, 1216, the truce was agreed but four days later King John died, leaving his nine-year-old son Henry – later to become King Henry III – as his heir.

Racecourse will honour its bookings despite closure

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

THE OWNERS of Folkestone Racecourse insist existing events due to be held at the sporting arena will go ahead, despite a temporary closure later in the year.

The racecourse, which is owned by Arena Leisure and Northern Racing, will close from December 18 due to a lack of progress in on-going development plans.

Folkestone Racecourse has said it will continue to hold weddings and other events that were already arranged to take place at the venue prior to the closure decision.

Racecourse manager Emma Santer said: "Nothing has been affected. We haven't had to call anybody and cancel anything, which is the main thing. It's all very sad because we have been here a long time, but we have nine race meetings this year, so it's business as usual."

The racecourse hires nine permanent members of staff, and there are hopes they will be given positions in another arm of the company.

The owners also say they still have hopes for the site and aim to work with Shepway District Council to ensure a future for the racecourse.

Arena Leisure and Northern Racing managing director Tony Kelly said: "Folkestone suffered out-dated facilities and has been the subject of discussion between the previous management, Arena Leisure, and Shepway District Council.

"The proposal for the site incorporated significant residential development which would have enabled a new racecourse to be constructed with much enhanced amenities.

"However, these plans have been delayed following the recent examination in public of the local plan.

"Discussions will continue with Shepway District Council in the hope there will be approval of development plans which would secure the future of the racecourse. If they succeed, work could commence in 2013."

Businesses are concerned the closure could have an effect on the local economy, with the sporting arena capable of bringing thousands of people to the area on a big race day.

However, Shepway council leader Cllr Robert Bliss insists the authority will do everything it can. He said: "We have worked with the former owners, Arena Leisure, for many years and are confident that this good working relationship will continue with the new owners.

"We will do everything we can to secure the long-term future of the racecourse."

OPINION

How we are cutting crime rates

Cllr Mike O'Brien looks at the action being taken to reduce crime and to protect our young people from being caught in the criminal justice system

IF YOU ask most people, wherever they live, what concerns them, I guarantee crime will feature high on their list.

Who doesn't want their family to be safe, and to live in an area with little anti-social behaviour, where our property is free from theft or damage?

In Medway, like in any urban area, these concerns crop up when I speak to residents.

But I think that through the hard work of the dedicated officers of Kent Police and agencies such as the probation service, the Youth Offending Team, Medway Council, the courts, and our health service colleagues, we are heading in the right direction.

At a recent council meeting, I was pleased to list the work done to reduce crime and re-offending in Medway. In the last financial year we have seen crime drop by 8.2 per cent compared to the previous year.

Violent crime has dropped by seven per cent, vehicle crime is down 22 per cent and criminal damage has seen a decrease of nearly 12 per cent. Theft and handling are also down, and recorded incidents of the most serious sexual offences have dropped by nearly six per cent, bucking a countywide rise.

We are not complacent, though, and indeed do have more work to do, but I am heartened that there were 1,517 fewer victims of crime in 2011-12 in Medway than in the previous 12 months.

That is because behind these figures is a story of strong partnership working between the public sector agencies listed above and others.

And this has also seen re-offending rates reduced to less than 10 per cent, bucking the Kent trend.

Youth re-offending rates are also down. One important contributing factor is that the number of young people entering the criminal justice system has dropped.

Last year, a pilot project called Triage started, which diverts young people, where appropriate, from court following arrest. Operated by the police and health service, this assesses young people in police custody and seeks alternative measures, such as intensive work with them and their family, or referring them to health agencies where needs, such as mental health issues or speech difficulties, are discovered.

Since the project fully started in September, only four young people diverted from the courts went on to offend. And, while a Medway-wide target was set that no more than 275 young people should enter the criminal justice system for the first time, only 116 did.

For those who did, though, the work did not stop there. And three out of four of those before our youth courts in

Who doesn't want their family to be safe?

2011-12 didn't re-offend – a 15 per cent improvement on the previous year.

This does not mean placing people in custody isn't an option. And young people who committed serious crimes were – with six per cent receiving a custodial sentence.

I would not try to pretend we are living in a crime-free utopia. Who does?

Despite what some might say, Medway's Community Safety Partnership has dedicated a great deal of time and resources to cutting crime and re-offending and this is helping ensure that, for the vast majority of our residents, the area remains a safe, clean and green place to work and live.

■ Cllr Mike O'Brien is chair of Medway Community Safety Partnership, and cabinet portfolio holder for community safety and customer contact at Medway Council.

Cheer on our stars at greatest show on earth

ONE week down, and the Olympics have already proved to be a huge success – not least here in Kent.

With the county's stars already bagging two medals, the coming week could be even better with a number of our finest performing on the big stage.

The Olympic spirit has swept the country off its feet, and plenty of people have taken advantage of the greatest show on earth taking place just down the road.

That hasn't stopped the rest of us left behind enjoying every minute of the Games though.

The country has unified under the success of the likes of Bradley Wiggins, so let's see Kent get together and back our fine crop of athletes.

We need fun at the fair

CARNIVALS have been a regular part of the county's way of life for more than a century.

It would be a major blow for many businesses, families and communities if they were to fall by the wayside.

The message is simple: support them or lose a great tradition forever.

We don't all watch the TV

AT the changeover to digital television, I took the decision not to change my television or buy a set top box – I chose not to watch television.

I applied to the TV licensing authority for a refund of the unused portion of my licence fee. I received a form requiring proof of either the date I left the house, ie a final utility bill, or the date of my death, ie a death certificate.

As I am still resident at the house and am still alive I could not provide the proof they require. They cannot accept that I just do not want to watch television.

The ordinary should lead us

PAYING a cleaner in cash 'is morally wrong': Minister says families who settle bills cash-in-hand are as bad as tax avoiders.

We all know not paying VAT is wrong, but why is it Mr and Mrs Ordinary are always the ones being attacked by this and any government?

Someone who has some small jobs done in their house for say £1,000 then has to pay the Government a further £200 in VAT. Not that I am suggesting avoiding VAT because that is an evil thing to do and can see the collapse of the economy, blah, blah.

Yet the same Government is wasting millions, the Speaker of the House had a shower screen put in for £1,500, it was reported Nick Clegg spent a £1 million on advisors, what about the billions spent on foreign aid to countries like India who have their own space programme, what about MPs' corruption, greedy bankers who do not even get prosecuted. There is one rule for the rich and famous and one for us peasants.

Mr and Mrs Ordinary's saving of £200 will most probably go to buying something else, like food or paying the mortgage.

The Conservatives are returning to a pre-war party of millionaires and toffs, the problem is the alternative, Labour and Lib Dems are exactly the same.

Let's return to a grocer's daughter or a grammar school boy running the country, someone who understands Mr and Mrs Ordinary.

Martin Clarke, Sittingbourne

Watchers are highly political

IT was with great interest that I read your story of July 21 (French fuel fears of new immigration nightmare, etc), in which you refer to Migration Watch as 'a non-political think-tank which monitors migration into the UK'.

I am not quite sure on what understanding of 'political' your characterisation is based, but I think it would be more accurate to describe Migration Watch as a pressure group that has the aim of shaping public debate on immigration, which is, as your article makes clear, a political issue of considerable importance; Migration Watch is by any reasonable reckoning involved in political campaigning.

Moreover, it is somewhat of an understatement to say Migration Watch merely 'monitors' migration; rather, its raison d'être appears manifestly to be to express persistent concern that there is too much immigration, and to mobilise public and media opinion behind this wide-spread yet contentious view.

Perhaps what was meant in the article was that Migration Watch was a non-'party'-political organisation. Even then, all the individuals you subsequently quote who endorse the views expressed by Migration Watch's spokesman are Conservative MPs. There is undoubtedly a correlation between Migration Watch statements and backbench Tory opinion, even if there is no explicit link between pressure group and party.

Likewise, it is in national newspapers firmly to the right of the political spectrum (Mail, Telegraph, Express, Star) that Migration Watch press releases are most frequently and approvingly reproduced.

Any reasonable assessment of Migration Watch's position and activities would conclude that, far from being a 'non-political think-tank which monitors migration', it is a right-wing anti-immigration political lobby group whose ideological bedfellows are more likely to be found on the Conservative backbenches and in Ukip than elsewhere. It is disappointing that in the article you – either naively or disingenuously – reproduces Migration Watch's self-applied description uncritically.

WL Duffy, Whitstable

Tax air travel appropriately

THERE is increasing demand for air travel (Letters, July 22). However, the solution is not to build more runways or more airports, but to start taxing aviation fuel properly, so air travel pays for more of the damage that it causes.

Air travel is particularly bad for climate change, which is the major threat facing humanity. As well as carbon dioxide, aircraft engines emit nitrogen oxide and water vapour. Nitrogen oxide is a greenhouse gas, and water vapour leads to contrails and more cirrus clouds, both of which warm the Earth.

Estimates vary, but total global warming caused by air travel is probably at least twice as bad as burning the same amount of oil in other ways.

Richard Mountford, Hildenborough

Polygraph tests are a lie

RE: 'Compulsory lie detector tests for sex offenders', Letters, July 29.

Presumably this is about using basic medical knowledge which tells how potential danger or excitement of any kind is picked up by the body's central nervous control system. Adrenalin is pumped through the body to power it into action if needed. It is what's called fight or flight, that is, stay and face the consequences, or run.

Adrenalin can increase the heart rate dramatically. Any changes would show on a polygraph. It doesn't mean a person is not telling the truth. The body's autonomic system is out of their control. A person doesn't have to be guilty of any wrong doing, but could still show signs of distress or sweating, racing pulse or other conditions which are inter-linked and register incriminating results on a polygraph.

Unless a person is taking beta blocker drugs or other prescribed medication to suppress a heart condition, in my opinion, there is no way to stop triggering adverse results on a polygraph. To use evidence from polygraphs, is in my opinion, a distortion and gross misuse of medical facts, and a miscarriage of justice.

Eurotunnel's 'satisfactory' first half despite drop in share price

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

SHARES in Groupe Eurotunnel fell almost 6 per cent after the operator of the Channel Tunnel revealed that its half-year operating profits had slumped despite an impressive increase in revenues.

Analysts blamed cost management at Europorte, the company's rail freight and infrastructure subsidiary, which accounted for two-thirds of a €45 million rise in group operating costs.

First half-yearly profits were also lower than expected.

But Jacques Gounon, chairman and chief executive, dismissed concerns over the figures, saying that he expected the Europorte division to break even early next year, especially as the company expected a surge in business during the Olympics.

However, it is too early to say whether this will take effect.

M Gounon said the spending, which included money on new staff and training, was necessary for expansion; there has been a 36 per cent rise in revenue in the six months to the end of June.

POSITIVE: The Olympics is one of several factors that could give Eurotunnel a boost

Group sales rose 14 per cent at constant currencies to €473m, while operating profits were €129m, compared with €144m last year.

"The full effect of the Olympics in July, the post-Olympic effect and the fact that our second half is always better than our first gives us great confidence," said an upbeat M Gounon.

The jubilee celebrations in early June helped create a record-breaking day for travel from the UK to continental Europe. In total, 10,000 passenger vehicles left by shuttle on the Friday ahead of the celebrations, travelling from Folkestone to Coquelles. This represented a record figure for any 24-hour period.

In addition, during the three days of the jubilee celebrations, 26,000 passenger vehicles travelled between Kent and France.

Eurotunnel is adding an extra half-shuttle to cope with demand throughout the Olympics and has increased the speed of shuttle trains from 140kph to 160kph – the speed they are due to run at in 2015, when Deutsche Bahn is set to add services on the cross-Channel link.

The operator of the Channel Tunnel and Le Shuttle car and coach train has already seen a "pre-Olympic" rise in traffic. Revenues rose 14 per cent to €473m in the six months to June, although net profit was steady at €5m.

Eurotunnel has also "intensified" the timetable in the early mornings to make sure spectators arrive in the capital in time for morning sessions.

In the first six months this year, truck shuttles rose the most, up 20 per cent. Car traffic rose 4 per cent, coaches 6 per cent and Eurostar passenger numbers 3 per cent.

M Gounon concluded: "This first half-year has been very satisfactory."

TRANSFER

Children's Mutual in Forester Life talks

THE Children's Mutual, formerly known as Tunbridge Wells Equitable Friendly Society, is eyeing a possible transfer into Forester Life.

The company hopes to be ready to notify members of any decision by the end of the year.

Graeme McAusland, chief executive of The Children's Mutual, said: "We always look to act in our members' and customers' interests and are pursuing this aim during the negotiations."

"At this early stage, we have signed Heads of Agreement and have entered into a period of exclusive negotiations with Forester Life.

Following a period of due diligence, we hope to be in a position to write to members about the proposed transfer before the end of the year.

"All eligible members will be invited to vote on the proposal at a special general meeting and we will also need to gain regulatory approval from the Financial Services Authority."

Euan Allison, UK group managing director of Forester Life, said: "We believe this potential transfer would be beneficial to both members of The Children's Mutual and our own members."

"We anticipate being able to provide better value for policy-holders primarily through cost savings. It also offers the potential for all members to be a part of a larger mutual organisation, supported by our parent organisation in Canada."

"Through the due diligence period we will work alongside The Children's Mutual to come to the best solution for all members."

ELECTRICITY

Infrastructure upgrade to keep the lights turned on

UK Power Networks is upgrading its electricity infrastructure to the tune of £2.6 million to keep the lights on in Dover.

New equipment, called switchgear, has been installed in a switch-house at its substation in the town.

A team of about a dozen experts are working to transfer all the electrical systems and circuits and all the new equipment is due to be live by September.

The site receives electricity via overhead power lines and underground cables at 33,000 volts and converts it to 11,000 volts. At this lower voltage, electricity is delivered across the area through a vast network of underground cables, bringing power to customers' doorsteps.

Project manager Simon Collingwood said: "The equipment we are replacing has served Dover well, but we are constantly investing to renew our equipment for the benefit of customers. This investment is to help ensure we maintain safe, secure electricity supplies, reducing the likelihood and duration of power interruptions."

"Once all the new equipment is up and running, it will be an essential part of the infrastructure that enables people across a wide area to go about their daily lives."

The work is part of a UK Power Networks £360m investment this year in its networks in the South East, London and East of England.

PRODUCTION

Contract encourages ecoegg producer back to his roots

A KENT entrepreneur has chosen his home county as the global production base for his innovative new laundry product after winning a contract to stock Lakeland stores nationwide.

Rob Knight, from Orpington, has set up the headquarters for his expanding business, ecoegg limited, in Maidstone.

The firm now employs six and the decision to house the final stage of production at a warehouse in the county will add a further eight jobs.

The ecoegg replaces washing powder and is placed in the drum of the machine to wash clothes. The egg-shaped device is filled with pellets made from minerals proven to remove dirt and grime.

Almost 100,000 ecoeggs have been sold since they were launched on the QVC shopping channel in 2010.

Knight and business partner Dawn White, both pictured, spent four years designing, testing and creating the egg. Originally it was manufactured in China, but Knight wanted to invest in his community and chose a warehouse in Kent to pack the products, which are now manufactured in the UK.

"I always planned to bring manufacturing to the UK, and after winning the contract to be the only product of its kind stocked in Lakeland, we've decided to do just that," he said. "We have researched the best manufacturers for the various elements of the product, and the final stage of production takes place here."

Each ecoegg costs £19.99, lasts for three years or 720 washes and works out as less than three pence per wash, compared with 25p for washing powders.

County investment agency looks back over 15 years

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

INVESTMENT promotion agency Locate in Kent says it has helped companies expand or move into the county 783 times during its first 15 years – a rate of one new investment a week.

Locate in Kent figures show the biggest number of successes came in the business-services sector (106), followed closely by ICT (98) and manufacturing (81).

The majority of Kent newcomers arrived from elsewhere in the UK; however, the county also welcomed more than 200 businesses from overseas.

More than 60 companies came from the United States, 35 from France and 22 from Germany. There were also moves from Taiwan, Korea, Argentina and Israel.

Among the French arrivals was SBE, which enlisted the help of Locate in Kent in 1996. The telecoms company opened its first overseas subsidiary in Ashford later that year, employing just five members of staff. The firm expanded on to Beaver Business Park in 2001 and now employs almost 1,000 workers on site.

The diagnostics arm of American firm Abbott Laboratories has also enjoyed rapid growth since arriving in Dartford in 2003, and now employs more than 400 senior scientists.

Locate in Kent also provided support for Japanese giants including Hochiki, Fujitec, Fujiseal and Hitachi to come to or expand in Kent.

In terms of jobs, Locate in Kent has helped create or retain more than 50,000 positions in the past 15 years, it says.

By sector, financial services led the way with 9,780 jobs, ahead of ICT (5,791) and business services (4,774). In the last financial year, 2011-12, a total of 3,243 positions were created or retained in the county by companies assisted – a three-year high.

Paul Wookey, chief executive at Locate in Kent, said: "Our 15th anniversary gives us the opportunity to look back on and celebrate our successes and, perhaps more importantly, plan for the future.

"We are proud of our achievements, having welcomed more than 700 companies of all sectors and sizes from across the globe to Kent. Many of these companies have flourished thanks to the county's unique business and lifestyle benefits and have become major employers in the area.

"Our task now is to continue to deliver into the future, in spite of challenging economic conditions. It is our job to deliver flexible solutions to businesses looking to expand or relocate in Kent, providing and protecting more jobs in the county."

Mark Dance, county council cabinet member for regeneration and economic development, said: "Locate in Kent has provided a tremendous boost to the county over the past 15 years. By promoting the county as a unique business location and offering access to property searches and free, professional relocation services, it has made relocation and expansion here a compelling business choice – a step hundreds of firms have taken."

VENUE

Support charity next time you all meet up

BUSINESSES can take inspiration from nature while supporting a community charity at a unique venue for meetings, exhibitions and conferences within easy reach of Ashford.

The Falcons Centre, part of the 100-acre Rare Breeds Centre in Woodchurch, gives companies a chance to get out of the office for some clear, uninterrupted strategic thinking.

Its beamed, barn-style room accommodates up to 200 conference delegates in theatre style or 150 seated for a meal. The centre offers flexible in-house catering from a simple finger buffet to a four-course silver-service dinner.

The Falcons Centre also has a private bar and a sun terrace area, while the adjoining Kestrel Room is suitable for break-out meetings or smaller events for up to 20 delegates.

APPOINTMENT

Dover Harbour Board has a new member

DOVER Harbour Board has been joined by Tim Waggott following the retirement of director Mike Krayenbrink.

Waggott, who joined in 2007, is director of business and support services, which is responsible for the finance team, infrastructure development and technical services, as well as the supervision of business management for property and estates, freight and cargo.

Bob Goldfield, chief executive, said: "Tim's appointment is well deserved as he has become a valued member of the organisation, using his expertise and vision to help guide the business towards a successful future."

Waggott said: "I am looking forward to supporting the Port of Dover business to realise its clear potential to grow, add value and further increase economic activity and employment opportunities."

Your company missing those vital calls? Firm could have the answer

KENT Science Park-based business GoResponse continues to go from strength to strength.

Last year saw the market-leading telephone-answering service expand into new premises on the science park and grow the number of staff to more than 100.

So far, the first half of 2012 has seen it continue its investment in technology and infrastructure by launching a new website.

Offering much more flexibility than the previous site, GoResponse.co.uk is now split into two areas – one for smaller businesses and one for corporate clients.

The website overhaul is just one aspect of GoResponse's investment in technology. The firm has channelled more than £100,000 into its new offices, and part of this involved ensuring that every member of staff was set up with dual-screened computers, making it easier for operators to interact with both internal and external systems.

Mark Kirby, managing director of GoResponse, is pleased with the investment and potential for future expansion.

He said: "We have invested a lot of money into both our premises and our technology to ensure we always remain on the leading edge of what is out there. Our goal is to deliver unparalleled customer service, and ensuring that our operators have the best technological tools in place is a huge factor in doing this.

"We have also invested in a training room, used specifically to ensure all staff receive comprehensive guidance and coaching to get them to reach the high level of customer service we guarantee our clients.

"As we have the potential to expand our team by another 30 per cent, it is important that we have the facilities to bring all new starters up to speed efficiently."

James Speck is site director of Kent Science Park. He said: "GoResponse are one of Kent Science Park's, and also Swale's, true business success stories. They started with us on the park in 2003 with just four employees and now they have more than a hundred.

"They are a prime example of how KSP can work with businesses to help them grow and develop. Recently, we supported GoResponse with their move to new premises on site, and we will support their continued development."

To celebrate the launch of the new website, GoResponse is offering new customers the chance to trial its message-taking service for free. On average, businesses miss some 20 per cent of their calls, and each call could potentially be new business.

Kirby said: "No matter how big or how small a business is, existing customers will soon lose patience if their calls are not picked up and new prospects may not call back a second time. In fact, research suggests that prospective customers are hesitant to leave voicemails – and if you don't pick up, you can be sure your competitors will.

"The reason for the free trial is that we're confident any business who tries our message-taking service for a week will see the benefits straight away.

"And when we say free trial, it's just that. There are no hidden costs or obligations to continue. If at the end of the week you haven't seen any benefits to your organisation, then you can just walk away and it won't have cost you a penny."

Training, courses and careers

Science students told to make their mark on history

BUDDING scientists inspired by the discovery of the God particle have been challenged to make their own mark on history.

MidKent College offers a number of qualifications in applied science and is accepting applications from prospective students for courses starting in September.

The laboratories at the £86 million Medway campus run a range of courses including astronomy, industrial chemistry, forensics, genetics, and the foundation degree in life science laboratory technology and bio-manufacturing.

Lecturer David Gammon said: "Thanks to the interest surrounding the Large Hadron Collider and the popularity of people like Professor Brian Cox, science is as popular as it has ever been."

"MidKent College is the perfect place for students to take those first steps towards a great career in the science industry, and hopefully even more fantastic discoveries in the future."

Applications are now open for the Level 2 Diploma in Applied Science, which is equivalent to four GCSEs at grades A-C.

Students who complete the diploma often progress onto the Level 3 Extended Diploma, which is equivalent to three A-levels and is also now open for application.

"All our courses are very hands-on," said Mr Gammon. "Virtually every lesson has some sort of practical element to it, which makes it a lot different to school."

"We find that's the best way to help our students understand the theory behind the tests they are carrying out."

"Many of those enrolled on our science courses enjoyed the subject at school but perhaps didn't do as well as they had expected and lost confidence as a result."

"We help them rebuild that confidence so they can move onto greater things, which many of our students do."

Lawyers offered chance to keep up with legal changes

MEDWAY Council and Kent Law School at the University of Kent have joined forces to ensure lawyers and legal advisors are up to speed on new developments in the law.

The partnership will offer professional training and seminars to students at KLS, and the council's team of lawyers, all of whom require on-going professional training throughout their careers.

Medway Council was recently given a clean bill of health, after an inspection by the Office of the Surveillance Commissioner. One of the outcomes of the inspection was the need for officers who want to use covert techniques and the authorising officers to have regular training.

Medway Council's portfolio holder for community safety and customer contact Cllr Mike O'Brien said: "KLS are producing law graduates of the future and so it is important we should not miss the opportunity to build relationships with them and the magistrates' court."

"These seminars will bring together Medway and Kent colleagues to share best practice and the wealth of knowledge that is on our doorstep."

"Working with the university makes real sense, and also helps to keep training costs down, which is beneficial to everyone involved."

Aron wins Apprentice of the Year title to follow in his father's footsteps

A YOUNGSTER studying at North West Kent College has won the prestigious Apprentice of the Year competition.

The college said Aron Baker, 20, from Welling, has been an outstanding asset to its painting and decorating department and has won a collection of competitions and awards since starting his course three years ago.

Now Aron has claimed the title of Dulux Apprentice of the Year for 2012, which is a national competition. Before this Aron won the southern regional finals three years in a row.

He said: "I was over the moon when I found out that I had won the Apprentice of the year Award."

"My tutor Philip Jubb has been really encouraging and I'm still celebrating."

It was not just Aron who won in the competition, North West Kent College were presented with the award of Dulux Decorators' Centre of the Year 2012, which means it will be hosting the Dulux Apprentice of the Year competition for 2013.

In 2010 Aron won the Best in Kent award, where he competed against the five other Kent colleges. He has also won the Skillbuild southern regional competition this year and will go forward to the national finals at Preston College in September. As well as this, Aron won the Southern Region Johnstones Young Painter of the Year 2012 and will go on to the national final at the painting and decorating show at the Ricoh Arena Coventry Football Stadium, in November.

Aron is near the completion of his studies on the painting and decorating Level 3 Diploma and National Vocational Qualification (NVQ), from which he claimed the title of North West Kent College Painting and Decorating Student of the Year in 2010.

Philip Jubb, lecturer in painting and decorating at the college said: "I am so proud of what Aron has achieved."

"Winning the Dulux Apprentice of the Year 2012 was so special for us all, his dad was there to share the glory and a few tears were shed by grown men."

"He is an outstanding decorator and well-rounded young man. He is a credit to both his family and the college."

Aron has a deep-rooted interest in painting and decorating that stems from following in his father's footsteps.

The college said he has a real enthusiasm for producing high quality work and he now works for refurbishment firm, GB Farbar based in Hither Green.

DECORATED: Hard-working Aron Baker, aged 20, has been named Apprentice of the Year

College's £2m for disabled students

BROMLEY College of Further and Higher Education has been awarded £2 million to build bespoke accommodation on its Bromley Campus that will provide high quality facilities, teaching and support for young people aged 16-25 with complex learning difficulties and disabilities.

The college says it already has a strong reputation for providing education and training for students with learning difficulties and disabilities and currently provides for more than 750 youngsters who have additional learning support.

With this new funding, Bromley College can now provide further education for the increasing number of 16-25 year old learners with more complex needs who otherwise have had to look outside the area.

Bromley College and the council say they are both committed to developing the right facilities to meet the education gap in the borough and when money was made available through the Education Funding Agency, the college submitted a proposal in partnership with the local authority.

This successful bid will mean the college can build a range of new facilities which will include hospitality and catering, speech and therapy rooms, state-of-the-art ICT facilities, media and performance rooms, and all with ramp access.

Work will begin over the summer and will be completed by the end of March, 2013.

The principal of Bromley College, Sam Parrett, said "This is such a great success story for the borough and we are looking forward to getting on with the project which is a critical part of our community plan."

"We are confident that we will be able to provide young people and their families with high quality facilities, support, and education in their own community."

Bromley College merged with Orpington College a year ago and provides education and training in almost all vocational areas of learning, with courses ranging from entry level to higher education.

Schools & education

Olympic hero praises school pupils as they win medals for aspiration

ONE of the world's top sports-women has congratulated Broadstairs students who have completed a programme aimed at helping them raise their aspirations.

Anna Hemmings MBE, is best known as Britain's most successful ever female canoeist, a two-time Olympian and six times World Champion.

She has also overcome health issues and battled back from chronic fatigue syndrome to rule the waves.

She was special guest at a presentation ceremony at the end of the Be The Best You Can initiative at The Charles Dickens School.

The programme enables every young person to achieve and succeed through raising aspirations and generating self-awareness and self-responsibility.

Students in Year 8 at the school took part in the programme which is enabled by a universities and schools partnership in Kent and Medway.

They received special medals to signify their achievements in Olympic year.

Headteacher Andrew Olsson said: "The programme is extremely positive and important. It helps develop life skills, citizenship qualities, responsibility, self confidence, and communication skills.

"Anna was the perfect person to present the awards. She is a great motivator and has inspired our students."

Cricket club bowled over by students who built new scoreboard

BRICKLAYING and carpentry students have built Canterbury Cricket Club its first-ever electronic scoreboard.

For 25 years the club had used wooden boards to keep track of games, but is now making use of the new 8ft tall device which can be seen all across the cricket club's Polo Farm ground.

It was designed and built by 30 site carpentry and bricklaying students from Canterbury College. The electronics were done by specialist company Durant Cricket.

The students began work on the scoreboard in January. College tutor and cricket club member Rob Bartlett challenged students to create the scoreboard, which counts as part of their coursework.

Club chairman Graeme Bennett said: "The players and spectators are very impressed because the students did a fantastic job.

"What they made was not only more affordable than what big-name manufacturers offer, but better suited to the club's needs because we were able to work closely with the college during the build. We'd like to have them make a second one in the future." Construction tutor Rob Bartlett said: "I think they've done a fantastic job. It's especially impressive considering they had never built anything like this before."

Youngsters asked for opinions on plans for university technical college

YOUNG people in Medway are being asked to help shape the future of education in Medway by taking part in an online survey.

The survey is aimed at pursuing the possibility of establishing a university technical college in Medway, by asking young people what they think about the idea.

The board behind the bid, run by the University of Greenwich, MidKent College and the council, hope the survey at www.medway.gov.uk/utc will get as much feedback about the proposal possible, to use should any future rounds of applications be announced.

An initial bid for a UTC specialising in engineering and construction was submitted to the Department for Education earlier this year, but did not get the go ahead.

Now, the board is continuing to look at options for establishing a technical school in Medway and is keen to hear what young people and their families have to say.

Offering a range of practical-based courses and qualifications including GCSEs, A levels, BTECs and NVQs, the UTC would offer hands-on training and academic study led by the University of Greenwich and local employers.

The idea has also won the support of the Royal School of Military Engineering and employers including BAE Systems, Delphi Diesel Systems, BAM Construct UK, and Land Securities.

PREMISES/ GOODS LICENCES

Sale of Former Dunkirk Primary School, Dunkirk Faversham, Kent ("the Property")

This is a notice made by The Kent County Council ("the Council") under S.3 of the Reverter of Sites Act 1987 ("The 1987 Act").

The Council is the freehold owner of the Property, which it intends to sell.

The Council owns the Property pursuant to:

- a Conveyance dated 14th November 1887 made between Henry Woollright and The School Board for the Ville of Dunkirk; and
- a Deed of Grant dated 4 February 1845 made between Baron Sondes and the Incumbent and Churchwardens of Christ Church in the Ville of Dunkirk.

The Property is subject to rights of reverter, having been transferred to the Council's statutory predecessor for educational purposes under the School Sites Act 1841 ("the 1841 Act"). The Property therefore reverts to the original grantor's estate if it ceases to be used for the purposes for which it was transferred.

The Council closed the school operating on the Property on 31 March 2008.

Under the 1841 and 1987 Acts, the Council now holds the Property on a statutory trust for the successors in title to Henry Woollright and Baron Sondes.

Anyone considering themselves to be a beneficiary under the statutory trust affecting the Property should inform the Council of their claim by writing to:

Catherine Lloyd
Kent County Council Legal Services
Sessions House
Maidstone
Kent County Council ME14 1XQ

before midnight on Thursday 6th December 2012

The Council intends to make an application to the Charity Commission pursuant to S.2 of the 1987 Act to extinguish the rights of any beneficiaries (being the successors in title of Henry Woollright and Baron Sondes) under the statutory trust and establish a scheme to apply the monies for such charitable purposes as the Charity Commissioners specify.

WARNING

Any person considering themselves a beneficiary under the statutory trust affecting the Property and wishing to oppose the extinguishment of their rights should notify the trustees of their claim in the manner and time specified in this notice.

KENT COUNTY COUNCIL EMERGENCY PLANNING UNIT VOLUNTARY SECTOR SUPPORT IN A MAJOR EMERGENCY INVITATION TO EXPRESS AN INTEREST IN SUPPORTING KENT'S MAJOR EMERGENCY RESPONSE

The voluntary sector has an important role to play in any major emergency response, in particular, those incidents that cause evacuation due to flooding or other natural hazards. Indeed, Kent's voluntary sector organisations have a wealth of diverse talent and capability that could provide significant assistance during an emergency to the people of Kent and the emergency services.

Kent County Council undertakes an important role in coordinating the work of the voluntary sector, supporting their work through the Kent Resilience Forum's (KRF) Kent Voluntary Sector Emergency Group (KVSEG). To ensure that all voluntary sector organisations are given an opportunity to participate, we are formally inviting all voluntary sector organisations to submit a formal Expression of Interest, with a view to establishing a list of formally recognised organisations who wish to offer their services in this manner.

All voluntary sector organisations will be asked to provide information about their organisations so that we may assess each group's capabilities, with a view to establishing a formal register of organisations who wish to be considered as members of the KVSEG and participate in a major emergency response.

If your organisation wishes to be considered for inclusion on this register, please email emergency.planning@kent.gov.uk requesting an Expression of Interest form. Alternatively, you may request a form by calling 01622 221200, or write to the following address:

Kent County Council

Report of Local Government Ombudsman

The Local Government Ombudsman has issued two reports following her investigation of complaints against Kent County Council. The first complaint was about the transition from children to adult social care services and the failure to provide the option of a Direct Payment. The second complaint was about not providing a service user with choice when they were placed into residential care.

The Ombudsman found in both cases that there had been maladministration on the part of the council, and this has caused injustice to the complainants. Kent County Council has agreed to take action in both cases which the Ombudsman regards as providing satisfactory remedy for each complaint.

Copies of the reports will be available for public inspection during normal office hours at Sessions House, County Hall, County Road, Maidstone, ME14 1XQ for three weeks starting on 6th August 2012. Anyone is entitled to take copies of the reports or extracts from them.

Because maladministration was found the council must now consider the reports.

HIGHWAYS - KENT

VARIOUS ROADS, KENT (RESURFACING)
(PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

To allow a programme of carriageway resurfacing works to be carried out, Kent County Council intends to make an Order to restrict traffic on various roads in Kent, as shown below.

The Order will become effective on or after 20th August 2012 for up to 3 months, or until the works have been completed.

The planned dates and times for each road closure or restriction are shown below, in a Schedule listed in alphabetical order of District.

Planned dates will be indicated by signage displayed on site 14 days in advance. Road closures and other restrictions will be in effect when the appropriate signage and barriers are in place.

Every effort will be made to keep to the schedule shown below. Some minor modifications may be made to dates and duration of works, to be advised once known.

Adverse weather conditions may prevent some works being carried out on the planned dates.

THE INTERVIEW

Jules Coomber

Clued up on Sherlock

Nick Ames speaks to the group of internet sleuths who decided to sniff out the facts behind an internationally-popular television show

BC TV's Sherlock, starring Benedict Cumberbatch as the Baker Street sleuth and Martin Freeman as Dr Watson, has been one of the major broadcasting success stories of recent years – and its stars are in the running for an Emmy Award in the US.

Bringing the classic characters created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle into the 21st century, the show was created by Dr Who team Mark Gatiss and Stephen Moffat.

It has been nominated for a huge number of awards and sold to 180 countries, and even the show's stars and creators were stunned at the level of debate in newsprint and online about plotlines and characters – especially a cliff-hanger ending which saw Holmes surviving a roof-top plunge before watching a distraught Watson at his graveside.

On Sunday, September 23, in Los Angeles, Sherlock will contest 13 separate Emmy categories, with Cumberbatch and Freeman up for outstanding lead and supporting actor in a mini series, respectively.

Along with a nomination in the outstanding mini series or movie category, Sherlock is also recognised for its costuming, writing, directing, casting, cinematography, editing, music, sound-mixing, sound-editing, art direction and cinematography. But it's not just the show itself that is being lauded.

Kent-based website Sherlockology, run by Jules Coomber, from Whitstable, David Mather, from Faversham, and Emma Grigg and Leif Harstad, both from Swanley, is dedicated to the series. And it has just been given a Shorty Award – the internet's equivalent to the Oscars – at a presentation in New York.

The site receives more than a million hits a month; at any time of the day some 50 people are viewing and it has a fan base of more than 100,000 people worldwide.

Coomber explained how the idea for the website came about: "London may be the silent character in Sherlock, but the idea of creating a website for the series came about during a trip we took to Rome in April 2011. While we were there, we noticed tourist trips to locations for the film Angels And Demons.

"Sherlock films in some really iconic areas of London, so when we returned home we had a look to see if there was any information online.

"We discovered there was very little on the series. So we set about creating our own hub of information, from locations to other behind-the-scenes content such as props and wardrobe, cast and crew information, details of the characters and episodes, and also a means of offering news.

"Sherlockology's success goes hand in hand with the programme's popularity. Sherlock isn't just a TV show – it's an experience. You feel experiences rather than just watching them.

"After you have taken the journey on-screen alongside John Watson and Sherlock Holmes, you can share your love and interest in the show with a massively-engaged family of fans online. We opened social-media accounts on Twitter, Facebook, Tumblr and YouTube and it just grew from there."

Humour is an important part of the show, which never falls into the trap of taking itself too seriously, despite its clever plots, brilliant action, sharp dialogue and fast-paced direction.

The affection for the original works from the writers is obvious, with many in-jokes referencing characters, story titles and situations.

From Watson being a blogger, rather than writing for a magazine, to Holmes's network of homeless informers rather than street urchins, the writers show genuine respect for their Victorian-era source. However, when Moffat was asked where would he go if he had a Tardis, he replied: "Maybe I would take some Sherlock DVDs back to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and see what he thinks. He'd probably punch me."

Coomber said she felt a combination of factors led to the success of the series.

"It's what happens when you have the combination of genius writing, a talented cast

SHERLOCKOLOGY: Jules Coomber, one of the site's founders, with the violin used in the TV show starring Martin Freeman and Benedict Cumberbatch as Watson and Holmes and fantastic crew. Co-creators Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss are both huge fans of [the original] Sherlock Holmes and have made Sherlock fresh and exciting for a 21st-century audience while remaining faithful to the canon, not to mention it's funny in parts, heartbreaking in others and, of course, very clever."

Although not officially endorsed by the BBC, the website has close links with the corporation, even supplying features for the Radio Times.

Its creators have met up with many of the people connected with the series.

Coomber said: "Not working in the television or film industry, it has given us an insight as to not only the process of how these things are made, like when we watched a little of Sherlock series two being filmed in London. Despite all this, we'd be lying if we said we didn't still get a little star-struck."

Sherlockology has put together a book of new stories sold in aid of the campaign to preserve Conan Doyle's former home, Undershaw, in Surrey. It is available from the website and has a cover image of Peter Cushing as Holmes.

"He was from Whitstable and it was a pleasure to use his picture," said Coomber.

But the big question is: does Sherlockology know how its hero survived?

"If we do, we won't tell," said Coomber. "And we don't like to speculate."

Yes! A restaurant that can do Mexican as well as I do

AS someone who is passionate about cooking Mexican food, I am always wary of trying new restaurants of that genre for fear of being bitterly disappointed. But my trip to Zapatas in Tunbridge Wells has managed to restore my faith in the experience of eating out.

Set in The Pantiles, Zapatas is a lively, vibrant place, decorated head to toe in bright colours, with exotic paintings splashed over the terracotta walls. I immediately felt like I had been transported right to the heart of Mexico.

Unfortunately, the music in the background didn't follow through with the theme – five-year-old pop songs with the bass so loud you couldn't make out the words. It wasn't too pleasant with our dinner.

However, Zapatas was obviously the place to be on a Saturday night as it was filled with groups and families, as well as young people enjoying the extensive list of cocktails at the bar.

After a slight delay with our drinks, for which the waiter apologised profusely, we ordered.

I opted for pinchos de gambas to start – five tiger prawns with chorizo, peppers, salad and mango salsa.

The prawns were gorgeous – large and bursting with flavour – but for £7.25 I expected a bit more to the salad than just a couple of lettuce leaves.

My guest chose bean soup, a bargain at £4.75 and probably our favourite dish of the night – a mix of beans and chorizo topped with soured cream and Monterrey Jack cheese.

An amusing moment came when we asked the waiter what the exact ingredients were, to which he replied "Er... it is soup".

For our main, we chose a double portion of chicken and sirloin steak fajitas, which were accompanied by guacamole, sour cream and salad for £27.

Usually, Mexican restaurants scrimp on the tortillas, but we had plenty left over. The meat was cooked to perfection and had picked up the right amount of flavouring from the peppers, onions and mushrooms which came with it, but it could have done with a touch more spice for my taste.

For dessert I opted for banoffee pie with cream and my guest chose three scoops of sorbet – two mango, one blood orange.

The sorbet was superb and the homemade banoffee pie also hit all the right notes.

The dishes were presented wonderfully and, despite the place being packed out, the attention to detail was obvious and the service speedy.

The bill came to £56.20, and overall Zapatas has succeeded in changing my mind about Mexican restaurants. I would thoroughly recommend dining there, but personally I would probably choose a quieter weekday next time.

Far East fusion could be the key to interest

THAI restaurateur Chutima Blakley has chosen Ashford as the setting for a new concept for Thai dining.

The fusion of authentic Thai food with the Continental café and patisserie should make for an interesting combination in the town.

Newly opened, the Lemongrass Thai fusion café and restaurant replaces the former Zarin restaurant after 29 years of trading at 31 Bank Street.

Chutima, who has lived in the UK for 30 years, opened the Lemongrass Thai restaurant in Tunbridge Wells in September 2011, followed by a Thai supermarket next door in March 2012.

Five-star approach for a venue of the world

NEW restaurant Five World Kitchen has opened in Mount Pleasant, Tunbridge Wells.

The new eatery boasts an international banquet and bar area, a buffet dining restaurant and an à la carte menu offering a variety of global cuisine, plus the trendy live cooking area where visitors can watch the skilled chefs at work.

Dinner is served from 5pm-10pm every evening and, having opened just two weeks ago, the restaurant is offering a 20 per cent reduction in prices.

www.marlowetheatre.com

FOLLOWING a hugely successful nine-date major-venue tour earlier in the year, legendary 70s pop band 10cc have announced their 40th anniversary tour will be heading to Kent.

The tour starts on Thursday, October 11, at Canterbury's Marlowe. Having sold more than 15 million albums in the UK and 30 million worldwide, 10cc are celebrating an incredible four decades years in the music business.

The group had 11 Top 10 UK singles to their name, including hits I'm Not In Love (1975) and Dreadlock Holiday (1978).

The current line-up, together now for a decade, features Graham Gouldman, Rick Fenn, Paul Burgess, Mick Wilson and Mike Stevens.

FOR the first time, Penshurst Place will this year have a maze attraction for visitors to enjoy during the school summer holidays.

But get this – the maze is made out of, well, maize. And it's sure to provide hours of eco-fun for the family.

The new attraction has been designed by Mazescape and will be open at Penshurst until mid-September, depending, as ever, on the weather conditions.

The maze will be free to visit for full-paying garden-ticket-holders and Penshurst Place season-ticket-holders.

For voucher and other card-holders there will be a small extra charge of £2 per adult, £1 per child, per visit to take on the winding, life-size puzzle.

www.jacks-festival.co.uk

IN the middle of the countryside, an all-new boutique festival has been planned for White Chimney Woods.

The site, near Benenden, will be alive with music and entertainment as the Jacks Festival welcomes local and rising talent, along with some top DJ names.

There will be live music all day and throughout the night – or why not kick back and relax in the Shisha Garden tent, recline in the sun-soaked paddocks while sipping on some locally-brewed cider, or just wait for the sun to go down?

In such beautiful surroundings, it is only right to give something back. So this year, Jacks will donate £1 from every ticket to the Hospice In The Weald charity.

Benedict does his star turn Is it a dream?

The Orchard, Dartford
Friday, November 23
01322 282053
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

FORMER schoolteacher-turned-male stripper Benedict Garrett is to perform at The Orchard Theatre in Dartford as part of the male glamour show The Dreamboys.

Garrett, who featured in this year's Big Brother, shot to fame when his story of being a secondary-schoolteacher while working as a male entertainer hit the UK media.

However, since this, his career has taken off and, as well as landing a spot in the BB house, he was signed up to perform as part of the male glamour show The Dreamboys.

The group have appeared on TV shows such as The X Factor, Britain's Got Talent, Celebrity Big Brother, Loose Women, This Morning and The Only Way Is Essex.

Folky folk feel a Power surge Fest of fiddles

Deal Maritime Folk Festival
Fri to Sun, September 14-16
01304 370220
dealmaritimefolkfestival.org

THE 16th Deal Maritime Folk Festival is once again promising to pack the town with music and dance.

The seaside town will showcase the varied traditions of folk and world music, including a performance from the all-new Festival Folk Orchestra, spontaneously created at two pre-festival workshops with musicians of all abilities joining together.

Expect favourites such as the Offcunduns Mass Morris, pub concerts, Shanties@RNLI, Ceilidh dance, braderie buskers and smugglers' sessions.

Headlining the festival will be BBC Radio 2 folk-award-winner Brendan Power, fiddle sensations Nick Wyke & Becki Driscoll and singer Ron Trueman-Border.

Raise a glass to the brews Beer festival

CAMRA Beer Festival, East Malling Research Centre
Saturday, September 1
www.camra.org.uk/beerfestivals

FOLLOWING its successful reintroduction in 2010, CAMRA's popular beer festival will return for a third year to East Malling.

The world-famous horticultural-research station will be awash with fans of the brew and ciders.

The one-day event is being organised and staffed by volunteer members of the Maidstone and Mid-Kent Branch of CAMRA (Campaign for Real Ale) and follows in the footsteps of similar events organised by the branch locally since the 1970s.

It is open between 11am and 8pm and admission costs £2 for card-carrying CAMRA members and £4 for non-members.

A free bus service will run from both Aylesford and West Malling train stations.

Digging the sunshine A visit to JCB paradise

Diggerland, Medway Valley Park, Strood
Open every day throughout summer
0871 2277007
www.diggerland.com

WHAT better way to spend the school holidays than with a day of diggers and dirt?

Join Diggerland mascots Duggy and Dotty for a fun day out in which children and adults can ride and drive real construction machinery.

Set along the banks of the River Medway, there are 18 different rides and drives, including the ultimate adrenaline rush on Spin Dizzy.

Test your driving skills on the dumper trucks, while for real JCB experience you can try out your excavating skills with a six-tonne digger or drive a monster JCB 3CX.

Younger visitors can take a ride on the Dig-a-Round or board the train for a tour.

International tango artist Dancing days

Vestry Hall, Cranbrook
Saturday September 1, 7.30pm
Tickets £10-£12
www.gigantic.com

WORLD-RENOWNED tango artist Martín Alvarado plays in Cranbrook next month.

The Argentinian will be performing as part of his latest international tour and will precede a social dance for tango fans.

Alvarado's show in Kent starts his season in the UK and Ireland; the tour will include performances at both Dublin's National Hall and the Edinburgh Festival Fringe.

The Buenos Aires-born singer has won acclaim across the world for his tenor voice and charismatic stage presence.

Having clocked up 23 international tours in 10 years, Alvarado has become a cultural ambassador for Argentina's musical heritage.

Taste of the Caribbean One Love Festival

Hop Farm, Paddock Wood
Friday to Sunday, August 10-12
0843 2249001
www.onelovefestival.co.uk

THE sights and sounds of the Caribbean will transform a slice of Kent this summer during a three-day music festival inspired by Jamaican culture.

The fifth annual One Love Festival will offer a visual, audio and cultural explosion to celebrate 50 years of Jamaican independence as well as some top names from the reggae world.

Straight from the West Indies, reggae legend Freddie McGregor and Dancehall King Frankie Paul headline the festival, which is packed full with more new-school dubstep bands as well.

Others making the Caribbean crossing will be singer Cornel Campbell, Dub Syndicate and son of the legendary Gregory Isaacs, Kevin Issacs.

Classic in the open air Join Rocky Richard

Leeds Castle, near Maidstone
Friday, August 10, at 6pm
01622 880008
www.leeds-castle.com

RICHARD O'BRIEN, Crystal Maze presenter and writer of The Rocky Horror Show, brings frock and roll to Leeds Castle with an open-air screening of the cult musical.

O'Brien will be attending the showing, in the grounds of the castle. He said: "Against this stunning backdrop we are allowed to watch on a really big screen, almost like a drive-in-movie event."

"And yes, there's more – we are encouraged to dress delightfully. I shall be the conservatively-attired one who is poured into fishnets modestly covered with a tutu."

The event is for over-15s only and tickets are priced at £15.

The majestic motors meet Classic cars

Margate Harbour Arm
Tuesday, August 21
www.thanetclassics.co.uk
Info@thanetclassics.co.uk

THERE will be classic cars galore at the annual Margate meet, with motor fans gathering at the Harbour Arm for an evening of retro automobiles.

From vintage British cars to classic American muscle powerhouses, there will be a motor for every petrolhead and there is even space for anyone who still wants to be a part of it. Get in touch with organisers using the website and email the address above.

In a great location by the sea, arguably the retro capital of the South, Margate's harbour area hosts the event, with The Lighthouse Bar, Bebeached Cafe and GBPizzaCo staying open and offering great deals as the event runs into the night. It all starts at 7.30pm.

Four-legged family fun Animals star

Rare Breeds Centre
Wednesday, August 8
Open from 10am-5.30pm
www.rarebreeds.org.uk

THE Rare Breeds Centre in Woodchurch will be holding a family fun day to show off its range of animals, and our four-legged friends play a big part in events.

There will be dog agility shows, pig-racing and pig-washing, falconry displays, meetings with Toby the shire horse... and even animal fancy-dress!

Other attractions include a clown act, bushcraft skills, classes in vegetable art and a display of American cop cars.

The centre is owned by the Canterbury Oast Trust charity and is notable for its range of work with disabled charities.

The Rare Breeds Centre is home to a range of animals including different types of alpacas, pigs, goats, sheep, horses, birds of prey and creepy-crawlies.

It also has a children's play barn, Mysterious Marsh, tractor rides, a butterfly tunnel, the Granary Restaurant and an award-winning shop.

Entry prices are available on the website.

FOOD & DRINK

Summer restaurants: Six of the Best

Jalsha Sidcup

Why here...

A fully licensed, air-conditioned tandoori restaurant, open every day for lunch and dinner. There are regular tribute nights and free live entertainment while you sample the tastes of India.

On the menu...

For starters, try the medley kebab with lamb and chicken tikka plus shish kebab. A popular main from the menu is the lamb-chop achari, with the favourite chocolate mousse for dessert.

How to book...

Jalsha, 169-171 Station Road, Sidcup DA15 7AA
phone: 020 83000777/
020 83002527

The summer is here... you can taste it!

WITH summer in full swing, there is no place like Kent when it comes to taking a ride out to sunshine traps and engaging in a fine meal.

Long summer evenings offer an opportunity to go alfresco and eat while surveying the coastline or admiring the full, flourishing fields.

Right now is the ideal time of year to sample the range of food and drink on offer in the county's pubs and restaurants.

Farmers, fishermen and brewers are in the summer swing; restaurants are busy; the tourists are ready to taste and judge – and we have our very own Kentish ingredients to bring to the table.

Dover sole, Romney Marsh lamb and Kentish strawberries are just three of the world-class products that come straight from our precinct.

Then there are the top-class vegetables that spring from the fertile soils of our farms.

And when washed down with some of the local award-winning wines, beers and ciders, the whole experience is a treat that will linger long in the memory.

Kent eateries pride themselves on sourcing as much produce as possible from local establishments – and with such an excellent range available that is surely the wisest course to take.

Away from the countryside, historic towns also boast top-class cafés, restaurants and pubs serving high-quality dishes prepared by talented chefs and served by keen and knowledgeable staff.

So now summer is finally here, it's over to you to simply get out there and enjoy it!

World's Wonder Warehorne

Why here...

World's Wonder sits in the countryside, offering a true rural eating experience. The pub is just a short walk from Romney Marsh, sitting between Hamstreet and Tenterden.

On the menu...

The food is both cooked on the premises and sourced locally, with free-range meat and poultry supplied by a local farmer. All dishes are home-made, including the famous rabbit-and-bacon-pie.

How to book...

Bookings taken through the website, www.worldswonder.co.uk; alternatively you can phone 01233 732431

The Red Lion Hernhill

Why here...

Located in the picturesque village of Hernhill, where it is set on the green, The Red Lion offers a warm, cosy atmosphere and quality home-cooked food. There is an adventure playground and garden for the children as well as new outdoor seating for alfresco eating during the warm summer months. Choose a drink from a varied selection of freehouse wines, beers and quality real ales.

You can dine from midday to 8pm in the restaurant.

On the menu...

Why not bring the family for the popular Sunday lunch, when you can have one course for £10.50, two courses for £13.50 or three courses for £15.50? Choose from a selection of meats including pork, lamb and beef, served with all the trimmings.

How to book...

The Red Lion, Crockham Lane, Hernhill ME13 9JR
phone: 01227 751207
web: www.theredlion.org

The Acorn Inn Birchington

Why here...

The Acorn Inn is a friendly, family-run pub in the heart of the seaside village of Birchington-on-Sea. Hosts Peter and Cath offer you a warm welcome to a pub that has existed since 1748.

On the menu...

There is a good selection, from fish to meat, on the à la carte menu, where prices range from £4.95 to £18.95. Every Thursday is steak night. Sunday roasts are available from midday-4.30pm.

How to book...

The Acorn Inn,
6 Park Lane,
Birchington CT7 0AW
phone: 01843 841196

Waggon at Hale Chatham

Why here...

A well-run family pub with good food, good wine and beer and a friendly atmosphere. Families are always welcome and in the big garden is a mini family farm with chickens, guinea pigs, rabbits and Crackling the miniature pig. Proprietor Emma Pearson said: "We do not try to be anything more than we are – a warm and friendly country pub offering real food and drink, selected, prepared and served by a friendly team."

On the menu...

The home-cooked food menu covers all tastes and pockets, with simple light bites to the ever-popular traditional Sunday roast, served every Sunday from midday to 6pm. A three-course meal costs £14.95. Booking is advisable to avoid disappointment.

How to book...

Waggon at Hale, 179 Capstone Road, Chatham ME5 7PP; 01634 400800; www.waggonathale.co.uk

The Black Pig Staple

Why here...

The Black Pig has a modern, comfortable restaurant providing range of home-cooked meals. Enjoy a drink in the bars and lounge from a selection of real ales, lagers and wines.

On the menu...

For something a bit different, 'Host your own roast' with a roasted leg of lamb (minimum six people); presented at your table with all the trimmings, it is ready for you to carve. It costs just £12.50 a head.

How to book...

French holiday homes to cost Brits dear as Hollande introduces new 'contribution' tax

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BRITONS with homes in France will now face a new tax called the 'social contribution', which is to be levied on all foreign owners of French property.

This new figure, similar in nature to the National Insurance contribution in the UK, is set at 15.5 per cent. When added to the income tax already charged, Britons will be forced to cough up 35.5 per cent on rental income from their unfurnished lettings.

Changes to capital gains tax will also be rising from 19 per cent to 34.5 per cent, meaning Britons who sell their second homes for a gain will now take home a substantially smaller profit.

The laws have been brought in by France's new left-of-centre administration, under President Francois Hollande.

However, UK residents will not feel any social benefit for their contribution.

Just as UK citizens contribute to the NHS in return for access to it, French residents paying their social contributions get access to a world-class health-care system and some of the most generous unemployment benefits around.

As UK residents, however, British owners of French property will be unable to claim from this social-security system, giving them little reason to want to pay it.

Use of the word 'contribution' is also important for legal reasons. Social contributions are

CONTRIBUTING FACTOR: Britons with French holiday homes could face having to pay a lot more tax not defined as taxes by France and as such are unlikely to qualify for credit under our double-taxation treaty with France, which is designed to stop British people from being taxed twice on the same income.

The UK Treasury is likely to be examining whether treaty relief would still be applicable in this context and looking to challenge any measures considered discriminatory to UK citizens.

But early signs suggest Britons may end up falling victim to exactly what the double-tax treaty was designed to prevent – to ensure that tax paid to the French authorities can be offset against any tax owed to the UK taxman.

Market still stifled by low lending activity

MORTGAGE lending has fallen to its lowest level since December 2010, according to figures released by the Bank of England.

Householders are choosing to stay put, deterred by the cost of moving home as signs of economic recovery are limited and fears over the euro debt crisis heighten.

The low base rate, at 0.50 per cent since March 2009, means many homeowners are happy to continue repaying their lender on the current standard variable rate rather than go to the trouble of negotiating a new product.

In June, just 44,192 new mortgages were approved, a drop of more than 10 per cent on the 50,544 that were approved in May. This is less than half the normal amount for this time of year.

Secured net lending also fell sharply, raising concerns about the state of the UK housing market. The figures show that the eurozone crisis is filtering through and increasing the cost of lending for banks.

Howard Archer, chief UK economist at IHS Global Insight, said the slump in approvals "indicates that underlying housing market activity is limited".

"Significantly, mortgage approvals are very low compared to long-term norms.

"Housing market activity is persistently low compared to long-term norms and while it may eventually be lifted by more mortgages being granted at decent interest rates under the Funding For Lending Scheme to be launched by the Bank of England on 1 August, this is unlikely to be a major factor in the near term at least."

LAND Rover's ageing Defender reminds me of the Citroën 2CV.

OK, the profiles aren't remotely similar and the Deux Chevaux – unusually effective off-road as it was – never tackled rough terrain like the Landie.

But both were icons that lasted beyond their realistic production life, except that Citroën never replaced the 2CV, while Land Rover (LR) has shown exciting successor concepts for the Defender – it seems the question is when, rather than if, we get a replacement.

For now, the old-stager continues and LR has even released a Defender XTech special edition (from £27,995) in military-style grey or bronze with contrasting black roof and wheel arches and 16-inch gloss black alloys with off-road tyres.

Even in standard garb, though, the Defender (from £24,255) remains supremely capable off-road despite a lineage dating back to 1948, and I was reminded of this at the Land Rover Experience Centre at Luton Hoo, Hertfordshire.

The Defender feels primitive and stiff, but you never doubt its ability to hang sideways off an incline, conquer a heavily-rutted slope and crest a rise before easing under control to the bottom at a seemingly impossible angle. Naturally, this ability comes at the price of fairly indifferent on-road driving manners, but if you need ultimate off-roading then the Landie still has it.

The real surprise of my day at Luton Hoo, however, was revisiting the other extreme of the Land/Range Rover range.

More than 60 years separates the Defender from the latest Range Rover Evoque (from £28,695) and, while I had previously experienced the latter's fine on-road capabilities and even done some limited off-road work, I was unprepared for how good the new baby of the LR range can be when the going gets tough.

Every exercise we tackled with the Defender was matched by the Evoque and, while one instructor admitted he would still back the Defender against all comers if the course became a quagmire, it was an impressive feat.

The tragedy is, that while most Defender owners will buy it particularly for off-roading, few Evoque-buyers will want to get their car dirty; indeed, LR chose to break with Range Rover tradition by offering a front-wheel-drive-only eco-friendly Evoque model.

Somewhere between these two extremes lies my real pick of the day, the Land Rover Discovery 4 (£38,825). I didn't get to drive it off-road, though its ability is now as much legend as the Defender's.

But it is on-road that this seven-seat Leviathan truly impresses, with a nimbleness that belies its size and bulk.

In luxury trim, it also makes a strong argument for not bothering with the more expensive Range Rover (from £69,995), but the latter's on- and off-road ability and outright snob value make it so much in demand.

Evergreen Landie prepares for last hurrah but still stands test

... the on-road experience. The Defender is harder to manoeuvre, noisy and poorly sprung, while the interior is far from sumptuous.

NOT SURE

... that many buyers mind all the discomfort. Most want it for its proper off-road ability, and almost all love it as a British motoring icon.

REALLY LIKE

...the Defender's air of invincibility. The old-stager shrugs off mud and can tackle a 47-degree slope. No wonder the military still loves it.

Numbers add up as Sportback makes premium sense for Audi

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SO what's so special about an extra set of doors?

That has to be the first question when considering the A1 Sportback – the five-door version, to you and me – of Audi's smallest car.

Not a lot on the face of it, since the Sportback (from £13,980) has a near-identical look to its three-door sister.

Look closer, though, and you do get extra versatility when compared with other strictly three-door small cars, such as the BMW Mini and Fiat 500, bought by the image-conscious.

There is also a bit of extra rear headroom in Sportback models compared with equivalent and £560 cheaper three-door sister models, plus the ability to seat five rather than four – significant differences for those who want a premium motor with more functionality.

No wonder, then, that Audi reckons the Sportback will outsell the three-door model by two to one, following its springtime launch this year.

The other big benefit is that the A1 line-up is incredibly green, apart from the overtly sporting models.

The £15,675 A1 Sportback 1.6 TDI Sport model tested here is lively enough (0-62mph in 10.7 seconds) yet emits just 99g/km of CO₂, making it exempt from road tax and the London congestion charge. It should also average about 70mpg if driven sensibly.

Now that's a pretty attractive package for a well-made small car that is relatively cheap, unless you go mad with upgrades; the test car actually retails at £22,360, having gained various expensive goodies like an admittedly tempting Bose sound-system upgrade, sat-nav, xenon headlights, sports suspension and 17-inch alloys rather than standard-fit 16s.

Many of these you can do without and, in the case of the bigger alloys (£460), I would definitely urge you not to bother since the A1's ride is best described as firm anyway and the bigger

A SMALL WONDER:

Audi reckons that its A1 Sportback will outsell its three-door sister model by two to one thanks to two extra doors and slightly more headroom wheels simply make it more unruly on our patchy UK roads.

The biggest waste of cash, though, would seem to be the two-tone paint job in Glacier White (£510) and Daytona Grey (£400), but you can't blame Audi for that when people also seem equally willing to pay silly money to bling up Minis and 500s.

What you do get as standard is impeccable build quality for a car this size and the guarantee that it will retain a lot of its value for when you sell. The dashboard is typically well arranged and thought out, while the quality of trimming and materials is excellent.

It is surprising, though, that the rear seats do not quite fold flat on the Sportback yet do on the three-door version, perhaps something to do with the three-seat capability across the back, where the three-door only seats two people.

Behind the wheel, the A1 is responsive and fun to drive even with our eco-favouring powertrain; importantly, it takes off sharply, making this version a cracker for townie owners needing some cut and thrust ability now and then while still minding the fuel economy.

The diesel engine can be gruff but is mostly smooth and responsive and settles well for motorway cruising, helped by a tall top gear on the crisp five-speed gearbox.

Keen drivers will like the way the A1 grips tightly and doesn't sway into cornering, although, as we implied earlier, there seems little to gain from the bigger alloys fitted to the test car, having driven versions with the standard 16-inch wheels.

The steering also feels a bit light – good for parking, but not so great for the enthusiast, who might well look to the Mini line-up where the Countryman estate goes a little further towards the Sportback's versatility.

Plug into Prius says Toyota

MINDFUL of the Vauxhall Ampera/Chevrolet Volt sisters that can run for long distances on electric power alone after an overnight charge, Toyota now offers something similar with its Prius eco star.

The new Prius Plug-in variant can cover 15.5 miles at speeds up to 51mph on electric after a charge of just 90 minutes, before reverting to petrol hybrid mode

Ecomotive to lead Seat way

SPANISH marque Seat already expects 40 per cent of its UK sales in 2012 to wear the ultra-green Ecomotive branding.

No wonder then that its cut-price Audi A4-derived Exeo executive model is now offered with a fuel- and emission-saving Ecomotive package: start/stop engine technology, a braking energy recovery system, low-rolling resistance tyres and lowered suspension, with prices from £20,040.

C-Class given boost for 2013

MERCEDES-Benz has upgraded the C-Class (from £25,915) saloon, estate and coupé range for the 2013 model year and already attracted a rise of up to 5 per cent in future residual values.

The biggest change is a new engine for a company-car favourite, the C180 BlueEfficiency petrol model, lowering its benefit-in-kind tax ratings by up to 4 per cent.

Be lucky and get a '62 plate

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IF YOU are superstitious and also thinking about buying a new car over the next year or so, buy now on a 62 plate, because the registration plate number next March will be 13.

And that's already causing jitters with some would-be buyers, while even the less nervous are worried they won't be able to sell their 13-plate motor quite so easily when they make their next car change.

Used-car valuation experts at CAP have had many inquiries about whether buyers can opt out of having the unlucky number on their car, but the DVLA says not, and CAP spokesman Martin Ward said: "Even if the driver isn't bothered what numbers are on their car, some superstitious family members might object."

And he added: "It's not often we say this at CAP, but we have no idea whether the used values of 13-plate cars will be affected or not, although it does seem unlikely."

What is more certain is how thinking small continues to influence buyers' new-car choice: the once-dominant family saloon/company-car sector of 20 years ago has been ousted first by the family hatchback and now the supermini.

Soaring

ALL THE RAGE: Superminis like the Kia Rio, left, dominate UK car sales now, while Skoda's all-new Citigo urban runabout, above, lives up to its name fuel and insurance costs and greater environmental awareness have been key factors, but Government pressure through punitive road tax on larger cars, plus ever more stylish superminis, has delivered a combined 40 per cent market share to superminis and the even smaller city-car segment.

Family hatchbacks are still the number-two choice, with about 25 per cent of registrations.

It might not be long, though, before family hatchbacks are under threat, too, from the new kid on the block – the crossover.

As the name implies, this straddles several sectors by being part family hatch, part MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) or people-carrier, and part SUV (sports utility vehicle) – cars like the Nissan Qashqai, Skoda Yeti and Peugeot 3008.

In the meantime, registration figures so far this year from the motor industry mouthpiece the SMMT show how superminis (S) and family hatchbacks (H) still rule the UK top 10:

- 1 Ford Fiesta (S)
- 2 Vauxhall Corsa (S)
- 3 Ford Focus (H)
- 4 VW Golf (H)
- 5 Vauxhall Astra (H)
- 6 Nissan Qashqai
- 7 BMW 3-Series
- 8 VW Polo (S)
- 9 Vauxhall Insignia
- 10 Mercedes-Benz C-Class

Eco must also stand for 'eco-nomy' too

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MANY early adopters of green cars wanted to show their passion for matters environmental.

But 'eco' is beginning to stand for 'eco'-nomy, too, as new-car-buyers recognise that care for the wallet is as crucial as care for the environment.

Many new models not only help to offset rising fuel bills but also lower or even remove road-tax bills altogether.

The latest tax bandings range from zero for cars with the lowest CO₂ emissions (below 100g/km) up to £950 a year for gas-guzzling limos or 4x4s.

Of course, anyone spending £50,000-£100,000 on a car won't worry about small change like that, but most people like saving a few quid on their fuel and tax while also doing their bit for the environment.

Longer term, electric cars may be the answer and there has been much publicity about 'plug-in' models for overnight charging at home or city-centre charging points.

But battery technology must catch up and the zero emissions argument for electric is misleading. Until we have zero-emission power stations, electric cars simply transfer the CO₂ and noxious gas output from exhaust pipe to belching chimney.

Production of hydrogen to power our cars raises a similar dilemma.

Are hybrids the answer, then? Japanese giants Toyota and Honda lead here, pairing conventional engines with electric power and batteries; the former has now launched a plug-in version of its highly successful Prius. This can run up to 50 miles on a 90-minute electricity charge before reverting to its normal petrol-electric hybrid system.

But hybrids tend to be dearer upfront, so the internal combustion engine still has a part to play now that its emissions are plummeting, economy soaring and refinement improving.

In fact, things are moving so fast that you marvel at what some legislative prods have achieved.

Downsizing is well under way, too, with many new cars proving that 'small is beautiful', such as Skoda's all-new city car, the Citigo.

Most carmakers also now have an 'eco' sub brand – Hyundai offers Blue Drive and Kia markets the Ecodynamics range.

But some don't come cheap, so weigh potential long-term savings against upfront cost; if you don't cover enough miles to make the fuel savings offset the car's purchase price, conventional alternatives may be a better bet.

Don't ignore petrol models, either; the higher price of diesels and the fuel at the pumps must be compared with new small-capacity low-emission/consumption yet lively turbocharged petrol engines.

THINK and think again when choosing the colour or added bling for your new '62 reg motor – that's the advice of the experts.

For you may want to sell at some stage and, like the colours of those hideous 1970s bathroom suites, might find that 'acid green' and 'latte brown' is not to everyone's taste.

Some wild colours can suit certain cars, though: Seat has used red, blue, yellow and white to great effect on its sporty little numbers, while Honda has also been adventurous with red and yellow on its Civic and Jazz models.

And playing safe can be a turn-off to some buyers, too, so here is a colour league table from the SMMT – the motor trade body – plus some pros and cons:

- 1) Black (24.7 per cent) is the perennial favourite but looks dirty quickly and shows little scratches or the swirling effect left by over-use of mechanical car washes.
 - 2) Silver (21.4) is still riding high and hides scratches and carwash abrasion well but is increasingly seen as the boring or safe option.
 - 3) Blue (16.5) is conservative yet smart, but very dark blue is best avoided.
 - 4) Grey Metallic (14.4) – more assertive and upmarket than silver?
 - 5) Red (10.2) had fallen away due to a tendency to go pinker with age, but better finishes and use on sportier models has helped stabilise figures.
 - 6) White (10) has shot back up the charts; it's usually a no-cost option with mainstream marques, but expect a hefty premium with the fancy ones. It also handles wear and tear well and reflects the heat.
- Also-rans: Green (1.1), beige (0.9), yellow (0.4) and brown (0.4).

Go easy on the colour

BLUE MOON:

We say the BlueDrive version of the Hyundai i30 hatchback is worth the money, but not all eco specials save you cash in the long run

Important dos and don'ts before buying a new car

Don't... accept the first deal on offer – be ready to haggle.

Don't... be afraid to ask for trimmings like a tank of fuel, car mats or further discounts or extras.

Don't... fall for what seems like a big bargain before you even haggle. It could be an unpopular engine or trim combination or a car on 'run-out' where production ceased a while ago – it might be just as thirsty as your old car and will depreciate badly.

Do... pick a model that saves fuel, insurance, road tax and depreciation – it isn't getting any easier out there.

Don't... be blinded by road tax-exempt but expensive eco models – check price, running costs, green credentials and the savings over your planned mileage versus years of ownership, then compare against the closest standard version. The savings to be made on the standard car may surprise you.

Don't... assume that diesel will save – you usually pay more upfront, so you need to do a lot of miles to claw that money back in fuel economy, and the engines are generally heavier, which means more wear on front tyres and mechanicals. The fuel is also dearer at the pumps, while economy and emissions on small petrol cars have improved and they are often nicer to drive. In short – do your sums.

Turning the corner?

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

DEMAND for new cars has strengthened in 2012 despite gloomy predictions for the economy.

Industry watchers are now confident that this year's final figure will exceed 2011's better-than-expected 1.94 million registrations.

According to statistics from motor-industry mouthpiece the SMMT (Society of Motors Manufacturers and Traders), the market is 5 per cent ahead of forecasts, with much of the growth driven by private buyers, normally the most cautious section of the market.

Private volumes rose 8.7 per cent over the first half of this year and touched almost 10 per cent in June. Meanwhile, the big-buying fleet sector volumes have remained on a par with last year, while business demand has fallen.

Of the vehicle types, alternatively-fuelled cars – electric and hybrid – are catching the eye with a near-50 per cent rise in sales for June. Diesels were also up, now taking more than half the overall UK car market.

SMMT chief executive Paul Everitt said: "Driven by demand from private buyers, June new-car registrations grew 3.5 per cent to push 2012 half-year volumes through the one million mark.

"Despite domestic and international economic concerns, UK motorists are responding positively to new products and the latest fuel-efficient technology. The industry has performed better than expected in the first half of the year and we will now need to work hard to sustain growth."

The technology point was exactly what Everitt predicted at the start of the year; its savings have clearly caught the imagination of buyers, as well as low-rate finance, dealer/manufacturer insurance deals and the lack of growth from savings that buyers might otherwise leave in the bank.

But it's important not to let enthusiasm cloud your judgement: shop around and get a realistic valuation on your old car, too; used-car values are buoyant due to the lower number of new cars sold since the recession hit in 2007, meaning fewer used cars in circulation now to soak up demand from that sector.

There are outstanding warranties available, such as Kia's seven-year/100,000-mile package and Hyundai's five-year/unlimited mileage deal, while servicing deals can prove to be very cost-effective.

RIDE ON: The Chinese bargain-price Great Wall Steed will be big hit in pick-up sector

Pick-up a bargain

TAX anomalies have made a huge success out of chunky pick-up trucks over the past 15 years.

These workhorses, usually from the Far East but inspired by the Marlboro Man imagery of American cowboy country, have displaced much of the farm and building-site business once catered for by the original Land Rover, and also found a new class of private buyer who simply wants something big, butch and different.

The appeal is helped by big tax savings when you buy, which makes the newest model in the sector look like a steal; the Chinese-built Great Wall Steed starts at just £13,998 after tax deductions and, like most rivals, comes with lots of extras and comforts as well as four-wheel-drive.

Man with a van gets creature comforts

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WHITE van man and his boss have had their world transformed within a decade.

Operators have seen economy, efficiency and flexibility soar, while drivers now get better performance, refinement and safety.

Initially, this benefited car-derived models only and included air-con and a decent sound system, but the philosophy has since migrated to larger vans.

The range of van capacities has also widened, varying from as little as three cubic metres for a car-derived hatchback for courier work or use as a company runabout, up to a 17 cubic-metre delivery van.

Access has improved, too. Many larger vans have low floors in the driving compartment for easy access and most vehicles above the super-mini class now come with at least one sliding door as standard to aid loading – many buyers take the option of a second 'slider'.

EASY STREETS: The Mercedes-Benz Vito offers a level of driver comfort that goes with its efficiency

At the back, there is usually a choice of side-opening twin rear doors or a high-lift tailgate, while cab doors generally have a reduced opening angle, making it easy for a busy driver to grab the handle to close the door and also avoid it swinging wide and hitting something.

And petrol-driven vans have been displaced by the better economy, range and low-down pulling power of diesels.

Extended service periods, lower maintenance costs and longer-lasting parts then compound diesel-operating benefits.

Gearboxes have also changed; a six-speed manual gearbox is the standard – two cogs better than only a few years ago – but urban operators are turning increasingly to automatic, semi-automatic or clutchless transmissions. These can usually be driven with manual selection anyway but are ideal for stop-start urban traffic conditions and can be as economical as a manual.

With better engines and gearboxes and weight-saving building techniques, vans are also following the car sector once more by becoming greener and kinder to the environment.
